PADDOCK FAILS IN THE TRYOUT

HARVARD STADIUM, CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 13—Charley Paddock, "fastest human" failed to qualify in the second round trials of the 100 meter dash at the Olympic track and field trials this afternoon.

Paddock was beaten by Jockson V. Scholz, New York flier; Keith Lloyd, U. S. C. and Chet Bowman, Syracuse.

The referee of the meet, which brought out 400 of the best athletes of the United States in competition to win their shields and a trip to Paris, for the Olympics, however, said that the contest for third place in this heat had been so close that Paddock should run in the finals tomorrow.

Paddock's unexpected defeat was the only big upset of Friday's trials.

SOUDER WILL SERVE TERM

M. Souder, defaulting treasurer of Lincoln county, sentenced to the penitentiary by the district court of that county, has dismissed his appeal in the supreme court. Immediately after his sentence he announced that he would not appeal to the supreme court. He afterward changed his mind and appealed. He has now changed his mind again and has dismissed the appeal.

BONUS MACHINE PUT IN MOTION

WASHINGTON, June 13. — President Coolidge today made available to the war and navy departments funds necessary to put the bonus distribution machinery in motion.

The president ordered Director Hines of the veterans' bureau to trim his appropriations so as to give $1,814,000 to the war department and $257,500 to the navy department. This money is to become available on July 1, for use in the succeeding six months, until congress provides more money.

JURY PANEL IS EXHAUSTED

Court at Ebensburg, Pa., Adjourns While Sheriff Summons Another.

EBENSBURG, Pa., June 13.—After eleven jurors had been obtained today for trial of the first of a series of murder cases growing out of the Lilly riot of April 5, the panel was exhausted, and court adjourned until late today while the sheriff summons others.

Nolle prosse wa sasked for the thirteen defendants acquitted yesterday on a charge of riot by direction of the court. Thirty-one held for affray and assault also confront the major indictment of murder and when the cases were called this morning Judge Finletter promptly granted separate trials for each defendant.

District Attorney Weimer elected to try Samuel Evans, of South Fork, alleged klansman, wounded thru the wrist in the fighting on the night of the clash.

IS FRIDAY THE 13TH.

NEW YORK, June 13. — Today is Friday the thirteenth.

Which reminded Mrs. John Steele, floor clerk on the thirteenth floor of the Waldorf Astoria of the following:

She was born on the thirteenth.

She was married on the thirteenth.

She was employed at the dorf thirteen years ago and has been on the thirteenth floor ever since.

She opened a new savings account and the bank book was 1313.

And there are thirteen letters in her name, Mrs. John Steele.

LABOR TO OPPOSE DAWES

Past President of Telegraphers Says Organized Labor Has Complaints Against Nominee.

CHICAGO, June 13.—Organized labor will construe Charles G. Dawes' selection as President Coolidge's running mate as a "flat declaration of open hostility to organized labor by the republican party," S. J. Konenkamp, past president of the Commercial Telegraphers Union of America, and prominent in organized labor, declared here today

Organized labor has many complaints against Dawes. Konenkamp said One is that Dawes tried to persuade President Harding to take a stand against the unions. Konenkamp said.

Labor leaders in general charge that the Minute Men of the Constitution organized by Dawes, was an out-and-out enemy of the unions.

"Dawes' labor policy has been consistently against organized labor, and the unions cannot do otherwise but accept his selection by the republican party as a challenge," Konenkamp said.

Bathtubs Once Unlawful.

The Nation's Business: Master plumbers are to meet in West Baden for their annual convention. In that small Hoosier model of an earlier Baden are springs famed for their medicinal properties. Perhaps the plumbers will be able to wash away workaday cares in the pleasant waters of this western spa, but it does seem that the mechanical adjuncts of the springs may tempt expression of professional interest. When the expert eye lights upon nature's bubbling founts will it not see possibilities of new-fangled contrivances for harnessing the flow?

If the plumbers are hard pressed to make holiday they might celebrate the tremendous exploit of Adam Thompson, maker of the first American bathtub. December 20, 1842, was an eventful day for Mr. Thompson, for Americans in general and plumbers in particular. On the morning of that day Mr. Thompson filled his tub, a coffin-shaped masterpiece of solid mahogany. He had his moment to decide, and then he took the step that forever plunged us into the power of plumbers. Oh, what a splash was there, my countrymen! Then you, and I, and all of us fell in! Mr. Thompson was at the very center of the disturbance, but ripples of excitement stirred the whole country. Imitators were told their names would soon disappear from city directories—all sorts of dread diseases were seen in the watery depths of bathtubs. Legislation was passed against bathing, and taxes were levied against using city water for bathing. Three years after the installation of the first bathtub, Boston made bathing unlawful except on the advice of a doctor.

Thompson made the splash heard round the world. Let every true plumber salute his memory in a flowing breaker of aqua pura—a draft in character with the filing of the pioneer bathtub. And why not a rollicking song, preferably with liquid notes? A flowing tub can invite as much music as a flowing bowl.

POULTRY RAISERS ORGANIZE

Delegates Meet at Agricultural College to Perfect Poultry and Egg Marketing System.

The authorized delegates selected by the poultry producers of the state met at the agricultural college Thursday to complete the organization of the Nebraska Poultry Producers' association cooperative. The meeting was well attended by egg and poultry producers of the state. The report of the committee on organization appointed by the Nebraska aFrm Bureau federation was presented and the plan adopted.

Harry L. Keefe, president of the Nebraska Farm Bureau federation who has acted as legal counsel for the marketing committee, presented the articles of incorporation and the marketing agreement and explained their provisions. Geo. R. Boomer, marketing specialist of the college of agriculture also discussed the plan and gave some seasonable advice. Professor Filley, head of the rural economics department of the agricultural college, gave valuable assistance in the development of hte plan.

The organization is incorporated on the non-stock, non-profit cooperative plan with a marketing agreement between the producer and the association

The board of directors elected by the delegtaes to develop the plan of the organization are as follows.

Albert Simmons [illegible]
[illegible] Murray, [illegible]
J. J. Scott, Meadow Grove.
Mrs. J. J. [illegible]
Mrs. R. A. [illegible]
Mrs. [illegible]
Miss [illegible]

At the meeting of the board of directors the Nebraska Farm Bureau federation was [illegible] to assist thru the county [illegible] bureaus in perfecting the local egg and poultry associations and [illegible] membership in the state wide organization. The local cooperative associations will receive and forward [illegible] to a central concentration [illegible] where they will be graded and prepared for shipment in car load lots to [illegible] markets. There is a probability that Lincoln will be the first concentration and shipping point.

A number of local associations are already operating successfully in grading and standardizing [illegible] products and marketing cooperatively

OPEN HEARINGS UPON RAILROAD

NORFOLK, Neb., June 13.—Commissioners Randall and Brown of the Nebraska state railway commission opened a hearing at 9 a m on the application of the C. & N. W. railroad to annual passenger trains Nos. 11 and 2 between Norfolk and Long Pine. The railroad was represented by several of the general officials at Omaha as well as local officials. Among the towns interested and represented were: Norfolk, O'Neill, Tilden, Neligh, Clearwater. Attorney Dressler for the company, in opening, stated taht the company would be glad to keep trains Nos 2 and 11 running if business wararnted it, and if the time comes when there is "something to haul" the trains will be rescored.

J. A. Little, former freight rate expert for the commission in making arguments for Norfolk and several of the towns west, declared that these trains represent a daylight service to which the business and people west of Norfolk are entitled

M. F. Harrington, O'Neill, declared that Holt county is furnishing more cream than many other counties thru which the road passes. He declared that the railroad urged farmers to raise more dairy products and if train No. 2 is taken off cream will be forced to stand on paltforms, resulting in great loss to farmers.

CAMPAIGN TO BE COOL ONE

CLEVELAND, June 13.—It's going to be a "keep cool with Coolidge" campaign and not a "raise hell 'n Maria with Dawes" sort of fight.

That decision was reached today by the Coolidge managers immediately after the reorganization of the republican national committee with William M. Butler of Massachusetts at its head.

Complete plans will not be announced until after Butler confers with the president at Washington early next week. But it was definitely settled that there would be no "swing around the circle' 'for Coolidge and no fireworks from General Charles W. Dawes, the republican nominee for vice president.

In all probability it will be a "back porch" campaign. The president has expressed a desire to remain in Washington all summer and keep his hands on the throttle.

In the event that no "summer white house" is established along Cape Cod, the high rear veranda of the white house, where oColidge has spoken frequently to visiting groups spread over the broad lawn, will be the scene of the infrequent campaign utterances of the president.

There is no occasion for the president to make any extended trips, in the opinion of Butler. He believes Mr. Coolidge should set an example of staying on the job and leaving the dissemination of his utterances to the newspapers and the radio.

With the quiet, conservative Coolidge heading the ticket, Butler does not intend to permit Dawes to make a spectacular stumping jaunt that might put the president in the shadow. Just how extensively Dawes will speak will be settled after Butler's conference with Coolidge.

Arrangements for opening general headquarters in New York, western headquarters in Chicago and a coast base of operation in San Francisco are virtually completed.

Washington has been determined on as the place where the notification of the president will take place. That will be the opening of the campaign. Frank W. Mondell, permanent chairman of the convention, will deliver the notification speech. Dawes will be notified by Representative Burton, Ohio, temporary chairman, in Chicago of his nomination for the vice presidency.

TOO MUCH FUSS ABOUT THE JOB

OREGON, Ill., June 13.—"The office of vice president is not important enough; there's too much fuss and feathers about it and I'm not the kind of a man who can be happy in that kind of a job," Frank O. Lowden, today told the United Press in explaining why he rejected the republican vice presidential nomination.

"There has never been a vic epresident, so far as I know, who has accomplished anything big," Lowden added. "I can accomplish more as a private citizen than as vice president. My heart is wrapped up in agriculture on a broad scale and I shall stick to it.

"This is not the first time I have been offered an important post. I hav erejected cabinet and ambassadorial offers, and I intend to stay right here and work for the interests of agriculture."

Lowden thinks the ticket of Coolidge and Dawes is strong and deserving of success.

"I shall give my full support to the ticket," he said.

Lowden was the picture of health. His face is tanned from much time spent in the open. He is fond of horseback riding; it is his chief form of recreation outside of his live stock and farm work.

"I am an active man and the office of vice president does not permit of much activity." Lowden explained.

"Of course I do not understand the importance of the office."

Lowden is devoting much of his time to working out the problems of agriculture and is active in several large farmer organizations In his first message of refusal to his supporters at the convention he said he could be of more service to the country by helping agriculture out of its slump than by holding a jo bin Washington.

Mrs. Lowden said she believed her husband's selection by the convention was due more to enthusiasm of the moment than a belief that he would accept.

FALLS UNDER MOVING TRAIN

Montana Man Beating Way May Die After Falling Under Wheels of Freight Train.

HASTINGS, Neb., June 13.—J. F. Wallace, thirty-five years of age, of Lavina, Mont., was injured here this morning when he fell beneath the wheels of a moving freight train in the local yards. His left arm and practically all of his left leg were severed when those members fell across the rails. His recovery is doubtful.

The Booth Family.

Kansas City Star: The Booth family, which has produced several well known actors, was originally English. One of them was for years the acknowledged leader of the American stage; another, the misguided slayer of the greatest man of his age.

Junius Brutus Booth, (1796-1852) made his first appearance on the London stage in 1815 at the Covent Garden theater. There he won great popularity in the role of Richard III and later as Iago to the Othello of William Kean, at the Drury Lane theater. After 1821 he acted chiefly in the United States, where he was enthusiastically received and held in high esteem as a tragedian, especially in the roles of Richard III, Lear, Shylock, Hamlet, and Iago.

Edwin Thomas Booth, who was born in 1833 and died in 1893, was the son of Junius Brutus and became one of the most distinguished actors on the American stage. He was born in Belair, Md., and his acting career began in 1849 in Boston. Two years later he played his father's role of Richard III, in New York city. His numerous tours of the United States, Australia and Europe were uniformly profitable, and he became known as the leading American tragedian. His most admired acting was in Shakespearean plays, especially in the roles of Hamlet, Shylock, Richard III, Lear, and Othello The not imposing in appearance, he was dignified and graceful, and his marvelous voice could express the finest shades of feeling. Booth was a man of intellectual distinction and fine artistic gifts

John Wilkes Booth (1839-1865), the younger brother of Erwin, is remembered only as the assassin of Abraham Lincoln He gave up the stage in 186?, after several years of acting in which he was only moderately successful, and his intense sympathy for the southern cause led him to form a conspiracy, with others, that brought about the death of the president.

Channels of Joy.

London Mail. "Oh, I dare say they are nice people But we've nothing in common with them, you know Both the man and his wife are wrapped up in music dry classical stuff that bores us to tears Now we like a tune all right but really we cannot understand such a taste as theirs!"

The little woman trips off, confident that she has disposed of the situation wholly to the credit of herself and her husband rational people, both of them, who like a tune."

How characteristic is her attitude of a too common lack of generosity! For of all types of generosity, broadmindedness toward the tastes of other people is the most rare. We cannot bear our neighbors to like what we do not like to have access to some form of enjoyment which we cannot share

Almost always we look down upon the people whose pleasures lie in opposite directions from our own And they also condescend toward us This preposterous little comedy might be avoided if we would learn to regard all tastes as channels of joy.

Joy itself, illimitable, indefinable, is beyond them all, even the highest and best of them. But by means of all of them, so long as they be sincere, some measure of joy reaches us. Highly cultured persons do, of course, develop many tastes. But it rarely happens that any one human being receives equal delight from music, literature, painting and sculpture.

Every living soul has its own means of communication with the spirit of delight. You and I may think that your joy is not mine, nor mine yours, and yet for all we know it may be the same, flowing to us thru another of those mysteriously adapted channels which we call tastes.

FORTY-THIRD YEAR. LINCOLN, NEBRASKA, FRIDAY, JUNE 13, 1924. TWO CENTS.

FORTY-EIGHT DIE ON WARSHIP

PUT OVER BY NEBRASKANS

Dawes Nomination Made by A. W. Jefferis.

TWO CANDIDATES NOMINATED.

Lowden Refuses to Run When He Is Selected.

Brigadier General Had Not Entered Into Plans of Party Managers—Nominated on Third Ballot.

CLEVELAND, June 13.—"We want to put some pep and hell and Maria into this campaign," yelled A. W. Jefferis, of Omaha as he placed Gen. Charles Dawes in nomination for vice president yesterday afternoon and today delegates were still wandering about Cleveland after several hours of just that.

General Dawes was leaving Marietta, O., for Chicago—the convention's choice for running mate with President Coolidge.

A republican convention has never before nominated two vice presidential candidates in a single day, but this one did. It is not often that a republican convention loses such control of itself that the managers are not able to guide it exactly in the path they would have it go. But this one lost all control. It had plenty of speed in its closing hours, but was winding up like a southpaw and throwing vice presidential candidates all over the lake front.

The brigadier general was nominated by a vote that became unanimous on the first ballot during the night's session. It was the third vice presidential ballot of the convention. But indicative of the differences of opinion that prevailed among men who were considered vice presidential timber, the convention managers and th edelegates, a half dozen other tickets were announced as positive by folks who should know, before the convention seemed to simply swarm on Dawes so as ont to miss the night trains out of town. If William M. Butler, President Coolidge's campaign manager, Frank Stearns of Boston, and a half dozen other convention managers had been correct, here are the tickets that would have been in the field:

Coolidge and Borah.
Coolidge and Kenyon.
Coolidge and Burton.
Coolidge and Hoover.

Dawes was not mentioned in the plans of the party managers and did not have any marked support in hotel lobby disucussions among delegates.

When the convention met last night, after hearing the refusal of former Governor Lowden no one had the slightiest notion concerning the likely nominee. Coolidge managers and the opposing factions, all were prepared to test the strength of their favorites thru ballots until they picked one strong enough to win.

Then when Dawes began to show the greatest strength in the field, there was a stampede for him. The delegates voted, yelled a bit and began gathering up their hats and coats before the ballot was complete.

AVOIDS THREATENED SUIT

Commissioner Schroeder Decides to Modify Request for Water District Creation.

Commissioner Schroeder will get out from under a threatened lawsuit by modifying the lines of a proposed water district. He made this announcement following a conference with City Engineer Erickson and August Eiche, who had threatened the suit.

Last month there was filed a petition asking that there be created a water district to include Thirty-third, South street to the city's southern boundary. Van Dorn. Mr. Eiche owns a five-acre tract at Thirty-third and aVn Dorn. If the proposed extension of main were to go thru, he said, his tract will be almost surrounded by mains—at least surrounded on three sides. He said that it would mean an investment by him of approximately $2,500 in water. The proposed extension would be of no benefit to him.

Commissioner Schroeder or Monday will introduce an ordinance creating a district for the purpose of building a 6 inch from South to Lake. If property holders to the south at once figure time petition for water, they will be fed from the north. Most of the ground to the south is unimproved acreage.

SARGENT, Neb., June 13.—Mrs. Edward Sullivan, mother of Claude N. Sullivan, twenty-three-year-old Sargent boy, who was killed in an explosion on the dreadnaught Mississippi yesterday, fainted when she received a telegram from the navy department advising her of the death of her son last night and has been prostrated since.

HAPPIEST MAN AT BIG CONVENTION

MARK W. WOODS.

CLEVELAND, June 13.—Mark Woods is the happiest man in Cleveland. Immediately on his arrival in Cleveland Monday he commenced to secure pledges from the Nebraska delegation for Dawes. Monday evening the delegation endorsed and agreed to support him unanimously. Since that time Mark has seen every delegation and told them the life story af Charley Dawes. His efforts were rewarded tonight when Illinois, New York and Pennsylvania nomination a certainty.

TORNADOES IN NEBRASKA

NORTHWESTERN SECTION HIT BY HARD STORM.

Heavy Damage to Ranch and Farm Buildings at Wood Lake and Ainsworth Ranch Houses Demolished.

NORFOLK, Neb., June 13.—Two tornadoes in different and remote parts of norhwest Nebraska Wednesday afternoon and evening did heavy damage to ranch and farm buildings and killed some livestock, according to meager reports reaching here today.

Dwellings and ranch houses were demolished in the sand hill county south of Wood Lake in Cherry county, and it was feared that still heavier damage and probably loss of lif emight be reported later. Telephone lines to the stricken area were down today, which prevented the gathering of complete reports. The storm covered an area half a mile wide and twenty miles long.

Another tornado north of Ainsworth, in Brown county, swept a path several miles long, demolishing ranch houses. The transmission line between Ainsworth and its power house on Plum creek was torn down throwing the city into darkness for twenty-four hours.

Deluges followed the storms.

NEW TRIAL IS ASKED FOR

Mrs. Dora M. Duffield Takes Exception to Crossing Case Verdict Given Burlington.

Mrs Dora M. Duffield filed a motion in federal court Friday for a new trial of her damage suit against the Burlington, in which Judge Munger directed a verdice Monday for the railroad company. The main contention in the petition was that the railroad was guilty of negligence in not marking with a sign the crossing between Strang and Shickley where Clarence Duffield was killed. The court held that Mr Duffield could have known the crossing was there, from other indications, and that evidence of the railroad's negligence being the proximate cause of the collision was not substantial enough to justify the case being given to the jury.

Total votes in convention, 1,109 necessary to choice, 555.

WHEN DAWES WAS LAWYER

FOUGHT BATTLES FOR ANTI-MONOPOLISTS IN OLD DAYS.

Prominent in Legal Contest to Unscramble a Burlington Consolidation and to Get Lower Rates for Lincoln.

When Charles G. Dawes, republican nominee for vice president, was practicing law in Lincoln in the late eighties and the early nineties, he was one of the liveliest foes that the railroads possessed, in a legal sense. He graduated from law college in 1886 and came to Lincoln the following year from Cincinnati. Nebraska was at that time in the throes of what was known as the anti-monopoly fight, the farmers being in battle array against the railroads, largely over freight rates. It was the year when Charles H. Van Wyck, leader of the anti-monopolists, had been elected senator.

One of the first cases in which the fledgling lawyer became interested was a suit against the Burlington railroad to unscramble its consolidation with the old Atchison & Nebraska, running from this city to Atchison. He was, as the memory of the lawyers goes, the instigator of the proceedings. The A. & N. was a competitor of the Burlington, in a sense, and the action, in which Mr. Dawes and Attorney General Leese, was brought on the ground that the consolidation was against the public interest and destructive of competition. They lost finally, but the case made a big noise for a time.

Later Mr. Dawes became very much interested in railroad rates, and made a thoro study of them. John E. Utt was then the rate expert for the Lincoln board of trade, which was the chamber of commerce of thirty-five years ago, and he and Dawes became fast friends. I. M. Raymond, big wholesale grocer, was in the van of the fight for better fates for Lincoln, which was finally won, and with Dawes' aid.

Altho young Dawes showed then some of the brilliant qualities that have later distinguished him, he found it hard picking at the law, especially as the real estate boom burst within a few years after he came and after that came the drouth and the panic. His active mind did not allow him to moulder in a law office waiting for clients who didn't come and his firmness of principle did not permit him to take cases or seek a class of business that was not of the higher type of litigation.

Mr. Dawes said that he did not pick on Lincoln by design; that he just happened to locate here. He did not come well equipped with the sinews of war, and one of the earliest jobs he took was that of engineering the layout of Cottage Park addition to Lincoln, promoted by S. H. Burnham and his brother, southwest of the city. Mr. Burnham recalls that Mr. Dawes gratefully accepted the $50 or $100 fee for doing the engineering work.

Borrowed Money to Wed.

Mr. Burnham was one of Dawes' earliest and warmest friends, a friendship that has existed all the years. No one was more pleased over the selection of Dawes as vice president than Mr. Burnham, and he discussed with evident enjoyment Friday morning their earlier relations.

"I don't know whether you ought to print it," said Mr. Burnham, "but when Charley went back to Cincinnati in 1899 to wed Miss Blomeyer, the sweetheart he had left behind him, he borrowed $100 from me in order to make sure that he would have enough money to finance the trip east and the attendant expenses.

"In those early days Dames was a most diligent student of whatever he took up. He had the confidence of Governor Cox of Ohio, one of the wealthy men of that city, and the latter furnished him money for his earliest real estate operations in the

HUGE GREETING FOR DAWES

Marietta, O., Hails "Hell and Maria" in Streets as Next Vice President.

MARIETTA, O., June 13.—Marietta today started its second big demonstration within a week in honor of "Hell and Maria" Dawes.

A few days ago the town and Marietta college turned out to welcome Charles G Dawes back to the commencement exercises of his alma mater.

Today he was hailed in the streets as the next vice president of the United States.

The vice presidential nominee received the news of his nomination in the old Dawes homestead here built by his father, the late Gen. R. R. Dawes.

The parade which honored him today, headed by three bands, went direct to the Dawes homestead on Fourth street, shouting on "Hell and Maria" until Dawes appeared on the front porch and joined the procession.

General Dawes is a member of a family which for four generations has made its home in Marietta. He was born here [illegible] 1865, and was graduated in 1884 from Marietta college.

Charles G. Dawes Formerly of Lincoln

Charles G. Dawes, republican nominee for vice president was a resident of Lincoln for eight years. He still has property interests here. He came to Lincoln in 1887 and left the city in 1895. A biographical sketch notes the steps in his career as lawyer, executive of gas companies, comptroller of the United States Treasury, international banker, brigadier general in the army during the world war and since then nationally and internationally prominent as a reconstruction agent working for the betterment of the war torn countries.

In a letter to the Journal dated October 25, 1911, Mr. Dawes speaks of his residence in this city as follows:

"The eight years during which I lived in Lincoln I have always regarded as the most important ones of my life, and some of the friendships then contracted are the most valued of all. Many of those dear friends have gone, like I. M. Raymond, Sam D. Cox, E. E. Brown, N. S. Harwood, C. H. Gere, G. M. Lambertson, John H. Ames and others.

The migration to the west in the 80's which I joined, was made up in large part of ambitious and young men at the bar and in business. Competition was keen and the law of the survival of the fittest had full play. If there was anything lacking to complete the full test of the character and ability of the residents of Lincoln it came during the panic of 1893, and the years of short crops that followed. Upon leaving Lincoln in 1894, I engaged in the gas business, in which I had already become interested before taking up my residence in Illinois. When I came to the state of Illinois I entered politics in behalf of the nomination of William McKinley for the presidency and, as the result of his success, I held the position of comptroller of the currency in Washington for four years. I resigned this office in 1901 in order to become a candidate for the United States senatorship and was defeated. I then organized the Central Trust company of Illinois in 1902 and was elected its president."

W. H. M. S. OPENS CONFERENCE

Woman's Home Missionary Society Conference Well Attended.

The thirty fifth annual convention of the Woman's Home Missionary society of the Methodist Episcopal church opened its conference Thursday morning in St. Paul's church. The conference will close Friday evening.

The executive board and auxiliaries officers attended a meeting in the forenoon in which business plans for the coming year were discussed. A picnic lunch was served at the close of the meeting.

The Friday session was opened at 8 o'clock with roll call and a brief report by each auxiliary of the work accomplished during the past year. Flags were awarded to the auxiliaries having the most efficient reports and largest per cent of members present at the convention.

WORLD WAR VETS PANNED

SPANISH WAR VETERANS SAY THEY ARE SELFISH.

Exclusion of Older Men From Tax Exemption Program Not Well Received by the Boys of '98.

The American Legion and the veterans of the world war were panned right and left for their attitude in demanding everything for themselves by way of bonus and tax exemption, by the veterans of the Spanish war, in their state meeting at the Lincoln hotel Friday morning.

Bruce J. Newlon, past department commander of Omaha, was most vehement in his denunciation of the attitude of the veterans of our most recent war.

"For twenty-five years the veterans of the Spanish war have been meek and unselfish and have asked nothing for their services and it makes my blood boil to see these young fellows come along and claim all the glory, ask everything for themselves and nothing for us.

"I served seven months in the swamps of the Philippines after my enlistment expired. For this service I got a $30 bonus and was satisfied. Now these world war fellows come along, many of whom never saw a trench, and seek to put us on the shelf. They have already received more of a bonus than we did and yet they are not satisfied.

"The world war veterans are now circulating a petition in this state for a tax exemption. When we asked to be included in the petition they refused to give us a thing, and it's up to us now to see that we get our share or they get nothing."

Other speakers joined Mr. Newlon in his denunciation.

Iowa Commander Speaks.

Department Commander Bollen of the Iowa veterans of the Spanish war, and Chaplain Sands, also of the Iowa department, made short talks on the tax exemption proposition.

The state of Iowa has already passed the veterans' exemption bill which provides a personal tax exemption of $3,000 for the veterans of the civil war, $1,500 for the Spanish war veterans and $500 for the world war veterans.

The Nebraska constitution at present forbids the passage of any laws exempting certain classes from taxation. It is the hope of the world war veterans by their present petition, to alleviate this condition.

The business session of the seventeenth annual encampment of the Veterans of the Spanish War was

"Y" BOYS' CAMP IS OPEN

Fifty-four Boys Are Enjoying Outing at Y. M. C. A. Camp Strader on the Blue River.

Mr. E. B. Robinson entertained the fifty-four boys encamped at Camp Strader Wednesday evening with an Indian program. He selected Indian names for the seven lodges in which the boys are housed and gave a brief history of Chief Spring Pull and a description of the battle of Wounded Knee for the benefit of the boys.

The present group at Camp Strader is the first camp of the season. Other groups will take the place of other camps to follow during the summer. The present camp is being equipped with the aid of Camp Major.

A camp paper known as the Camp Strader Whizzer is to be published. The staff has been chosen, and six issues will head as many departments in the organ.

President of the French senate by Friday elected president of France, to replace Millerand, who was forced out.

TWO HELD FOR INVESTIGATION

Lew Kiser, forty-nine, and Tom Moran, twenty-nine, both of Omaha were picked up on the streets by Detective Schneible and taken to the city jail at 1 p. m. Friday where they are being held for investigation. The men carried nearly $100 between them. They said they were but recently from Fremont and had been picked up there but turned loose to leave town. Police will communicate with Sheriff Condit of Fremont to verify the story.

MAIL SACKS ARE SEIZED

BANDITS NEAR RONDOUT, ILL., GET BIG SUMS.

Cash and Bonds Estimated at Between $1,000,000 and $2,500,000 in Loot Taken by Robber Band.

CHICAGO, June 13.—Hundreds of heavily armed police, detectives and sheriff's deputies staged an old fashioned man hunt today thruout northern Illinois in search of a band of robbers who held up the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul special train thirty miles north of Chicago last night and escaped with forty-two sacks of registered mail containing currency and securities estimated at between $1,000,000 and $2,500,000.

The robbery was consummated without the firing of a single shot in defense of the treasure by the seventy clerks and crew, so far as police could ascertain. One bandit was shot down, but the shot was fired by a fellow bandit who mistook his victim for a mail guard.

Postal inspectors said they suspected the bandits had some help from "the inside" and are questioning the clerks and guards, who were taken to the federal building on arrival at St. Paul today.

Gas bombs, revolvers, shotguns and rifles were used by the bandits to intimidate the clerks and guards and drive them from their barricaded cars.

The train, made up of eleven cars, was roaring past Rondout, Ill., thirty miles north of here, near midnight when two armed men crawled over the tender and into the engine cab.

"Stop when you see a red light or you are dead men," S. R. Waite, engineer, and E. J. Biddle, fireman, were told.

The muzzle of a revolver was held at Waite's neck as the train sped on. Two miles north of Rondout, at a cross road, a red light flickered, and Waite stopped the train.

Guards Alarmed

The head lights of four automobiles lighted up the scene as men swarmed out of the gloom. Alarmed by the stopping of the train, guards peered out, saw the men running toward them and slammed and barricaded the doors. They switched out the lights.

A crackle of rifle and revolver shots broke out and bullets chugged against and thru the doors, and at the same time the bandits ordered that the doors be thrown open. When the guards and clerks failed to obey a shower of bullets crashed thru the windows. The bandits concentrated on two cars carrying the bulk of the mail and all the registered mail sacks.

There was a momentary pause and then tear gas bombs already hurled thru the shattered windows. Sputtering and coughing the doors were thrown open and the clerks and guards staggered to the ground. They were quickly herded to one side and then one bandit shoved a gas mask at Louis Philipe Milwaukee head of the force of guards.

"Get in there and be quick" the bandit cried and dropping another mask leaped into a car after Philipe.

Hand out the sacks!" the bandit ordered, referring to the registered mail sacks.

The bandit appeared to have full

NEBRASKA MAN IS AMONG DEAD

Claude Sullivan of Sargent, Seaman, Is Killed.

IN HARBOR OF SAN PEDRO

Three Members of Crew From New Mexico Visiting Sister Ship Owe Their Lives to Powder Magazine.

MOTHER FAINTS AT NEWS.

SARGENT, Neb., June 13.—Mrs. Edward Sullivan, mother of Claude N. Sullivan, twenty-three-year-old Sargent boy, who was killed by an explosion on the dreadnaught Mississippi yesterday, fainted when she received a telegram from the navy department advising her of the death of her son last night and has been prostrated since.

SAN PEDRO, Cal., June 13.—Riding calmly at anchor the U. S. S. Mississippi rested in its accustomed position in "battleship row" today giving little evidence of the tragedy aboard her which a few hours before had instantly killed forty-eight officers and men.

Close by stood the hospital ship Relief, turned into a morgue to receive the bodies comprising the toll of the navy's greatest peace time horror and to treat the burns of the suffering men, many of whom prayed for death to end their agony.

Later today a board of inquiry was to convene. Capt. Yates Sterling, commanding officer of the U. S. S. New Mexica, will be in charge of the investigation seeking to determine the cause of the explosion yesterday in the forward turret of the Mississippi while the dreadnaught was in battle practice off San Clemente island, fifty miles at sea.

T. N. T. Explosion First.

There were two blasts, each claiming its toll of life. The first was the explosion of TNT compaund being packed behind a shell in number four gun as rivalry grew intense out in the ocean target field. The second was four hours later when the dreadnaught had returned to the harbor.

FLOOD LOSS IS SERIOUS

RAIL TRAFFIC INTERRUPTED BY SEVERAL WASHOUTS.

Thursday's Deluge in Eastern Nebraska Heavy Enough to Cause Serious Derangement on Four Roads.

Eastern Nebraska railroads were still struggling with flood damage Thursday. All of the broken lines were in the vicinity of the Platte river between Fremont and Plattsmouth. The one direct road connecting Omaha with Lincoln Friday morning was the Burlington Chalco line. The Rock Island had a serious washout in the vicinity of South Bend, the Union Pacific has breaks in its line near Mead, Wahoo and Yutan and the Missouri Pacific was washed out in several places near the Platte river.

The Burlington handled Union Pacific and Rock Island trains Thursday and the lineup indicated a continuance of those trains over the Burlington on Friday.

Reports from the Union Pacific indicated that their line might be restored by afternoon Friday. The Rock Island expected to be able to run trains over its road late Friday afternoon. The Missouri Pacific was restoring service over its Omaha road Friday morning.

Burlington officials expected to repair the damage on their line between South Bend and Plattsmouth some time Friday. Several sections of track were washed away and some damage was done to bridges. At one time Thursday water was over the main line in the vicinity of Oreapolis, while near Cedar Creek it was hours after the flood began before the water lowered sufficiently to estimate the amount of damage done.

Burlington reports Friday morning indicated showers in eastern Colorado and rather heavy showers during the night before between Nebraska City and Lincoln. Light showers passed over eastern Nebraska Friday forenoon.

THE WEATHER.

For Lincoln and vicinity: Partly overcast tonight and Saturday, possibly showers, somewhat cooler tonight.

For Nebraska: Partly overcast tonight and Saturday, possibly showers; somewhat cooler tonight.

HAVELOCK WILL CELEBRATE

Fourth of July to Be a Big Day in Shoptown.

Mayor Vener's fourth of July celebration committee reports elaborate preparations under way for the holiday, shopmen and business men cooperating thruout. The shops band will play two concerts, and diner at noon in the city park wil be followed by a parade and a program of sports. A feature of the latter, according to Chairman F. S. McCoy, will be a horseshoe pitching tournament. There will be games and contests for people of all ages, and prizes will be given. Werner Lehman of the dance committee has promised a 60 by 80 foot floor near the park, and a seven piece orchestra. The committee will meet at the mayor's office again Monday evening.

STORE YEGGS PULLING OUT

LATE EXPERIENCES TURN THEM FROM NEBRASKA.

Of Nine Big Robberies in Past Six Months, But Two Could Be Catalogued as Clear and Clean Getaways.

Of nine big store robberies staged in Nebraska within the past six months, in but two instances have peace officers failed either to capture the perpetrators or recover the goods. Secretary Watson of the Nebraska Retail Dealers' association, revealed statistics as proof of this assertion. On Friday in the presence of State Sheriff Carroll, he saw to the opening and invoicing of another shipment of goods stolen in Nebraska and recovered in Chicago.

Approximately $1,000 worth of merchandise had already been returned to Sheriff Condit at Fremont for distribution among merchants who could identify. This last shipment now awaits identification. It is a block of the goods alleged to have been billed by Max Ross, alias "Lucky Kid" to an Illinois merchant. Ross, in jail at Fremont, was recently bound over to the district court on a burglary charge. Attempt is being made to connect him with upwards of a dozen robberies within the past few years.

Ross, suspected of gang leadership, was traced east thru the efforts of Sheriff Condit. He was arrested in Milwaukee when caught with a pal. The two were trailed back to Kokomo where, according to officers they picked up two girls and took them to Chicago and later to Milwaukee. When Ross was returned to Nebraska, his pal and the girls were held in custody at Milwaukee.

In view of their failure to "get by" in this state, it is believed that old-time store rorbers are giving Nebraska the slip. There have been few robberies of any consequence in recent weeks. Desertion of the Nebraska field by expert talent would not, however, discourage local talent from pulling an occasional job. Secretary Watson credits success in rounding up burglars and suspects to cooperation between state and local authorities, to the excellent work of such men as Sheriff Condit, to the general caliber of peace officers and to the bulldog determination to hang onto the trail until it lead some place.

MAYOR GREATLY PLEASED

But it is more than personal satisfaction. He will be a great asset to the administration and to the country at large. We need a business administration (A.) Washington will respect General Dawes."

The mayor is not only a personal friend of Mr. Dawes but has always admired him. Commissioner Dales, also well acquainted with the man who is bringing additional fame to Lincoln, said:

COMMITTEE ORGANIZED

SOME BITTERNESS APPEARS WITHIN THE GROUP.

Unfortunate That Coolidge-Dawes Ticket Goes to Post With Jockey Sharply at Odds With Trainers.

By Robert J. Bender

CLEVELAND, June 13.—Dire murmurings of a revolt running thru the rank and file of the republican national committee evaporated into thin air today when the committee met to organize for the presidential campaign.

The Coolidge slate of officers, headed by William B. Butler, as chairman, was put thru with but one exception. William V. Hodges of Denver was elected treasurer to succeed Fred Upham, resigned. Arthur Mellon of Pittsburgh, a relative of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, had been picked to fill his post.

Butler's selection was unanimous, those who were voting their anger yesterday at what they termed mismanagement of the vice presidential nomination situation, had cooled off completely today

Of course there is nothing to do but elect Butler to lead the national committee. It is the president's wish—and there are none to deny him. But it is perhaps unfortunate that the Coolidge-Dawes ticket goes to the post for the great quadrennial presidential sweepstakes, with its jockey sharply at odds with the trainers and many of those conducting the race.

There were many rough spots in the handling of the vice presidential nomination in the convention yesterday and perhaps still more in the private room conferences which preceded the balloting. Many of the old time republican leaders pointed to these as indicative of Butler's lack of experience in national political matters. Then, too, there was much resentment that Butler—an "outsider"—should come into the party councils and attempt to establish a dictatorship over a domain long ruled by old school politicians.

Butler wanted Senator Borah for Coolidge's running mate. He "thought" Borah would accept. It was said Borah had never said he would not—to President Coolidge, who probably never asked him to Political lealers in the great states of Pennsylvania, New York and Ohio said "All right, we'll put over Borah."

Then Borah threw the job back into their faces and Butler heard more than one strong administration pillar say, "I, for one, will wash my hands of the whole business"

But men like Senators Reed and Pepper of Pennsylvania, Wadsworth of New York and Willis of Ohio decided to try, with the aid of some of the old timers, to put over for the vice presidency one of their senatorial or congressional number. They agreed upon Senator Curtis—and didn't tell Butler about it.

Butler Opposed Curtis.

But the shrewd Yankee manager of Mr. Coolidge soon heard what was going on and served notice that he would oppose the selection of Curtis even to the point of carrying his fight to the paltform if necessary. He countered the Curtis proposal with one for Theodore Burton of Ohio. Balloting began with the situation there.

Butler's opposition, of course killed Curtis chances, and Burton was regarded as too old and not the type of man to appeal for votes in sections where votes were needed. So, with their candidate squelched by Butler, the "senatorial clique' 'tunred to former Governor Lowden to turn aside Burton.

Lowden's friends in the convention tried in vain to prevent his nomination and after failing tried further to discourage voting for him. But it was evident on the first ballot that Lowden commanded much popular favor. He led the field on the first ballot while Burton could muster only enough votes to run fourth—behind Kenyon and Dawes.

Burton threatened to do better, however, according to Butler, so on the second ballot Lowden was eased over into a nomination.

Now this may have been done just to show Mr. Butler what can and can't be done at a convention. It was noticed that after the nomination was formally announced none of the big delegations walked toward the doors thinking the session was about over and most of the old timers were in their seats.

Since Lowden already had declined the nomination two or three times and since the old timers knew how Lowden felt about the political chicanery which jerked the presidential nomination from under his seat in 1920, they weren't surprised at his refusal once more.

So, Burton couldn't get it, Lowden wouldn't have it—and things were all at sixes and sevens.

The convention recessed so that the leaders could think things over again. Butler suggested Judge Kenyon of Iowa again, but Pennsylvania, New York and Ohio joined in an emphatic chorus of "Absolutely, no."

With two throw downs on his record, Butler turned to Secretary Hoover. It was pointed out to Butler that Hoover's position was much the same as that of Borah and Lowden—it would embarrass him to accept after strenuously saying he wanted none of the job.

Would be Embarrassed.

A committee talked with Hoover on the phone. They returned with the bad news taht Hoover would be "embarrassed" by a nomination.

Butler was adamant. It was difficult for him to understand how many men could refuse the office, if nominated, because it never had been done before. And while Lowden did it, there were extenuating circumstances.

So the balloting proceeded with the word passed from Butler's quarters that Hoover would go over "sure."

But, by this time, the delegates were in ripe mood for a revolt against any more of Butler's candidates, and they rode thru on Dawes, the pick of the big business delegations, who turned enough votes to him early in the balloting to get the semblance of a stampede started in the minds of the weary delegates.

HODGES MADE TREASURER

Denver Attorney Is Elected to Place on Republican National Committee.

CLEVELAND, June 13.—William V. Hodges attorney of Denver, Col., was made treasurer of the republican national committee at a meetnig here today.

Hodges is president of the Denver Civil and Commercial association and a graduate of Columbia university. He is forty eight years old.

William M. Butler, Massachusetts, who managed Coolidge's pre-convention campaign, was made chairman of the cimmittee.

Roy West, Chicago, was selected as the new secretary.

Ralph A. Williams, Oregon, and Charles A. Hilles, New York, were named vice chairmen to succeed themselves.

Mrs. A. T. Hert, of Louisville, Ky., widow of the national committeeman, succeeds Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton as the women's vice chairman of the committee.

Singapore.

Harper's Magazine: To leave the sea and to land at Singapore is as serious a matter as taking a man out of a long seclusion and releasing him from a closed vehicle in Picadilly Circus.

Molten light poured over the swift kaleidoscopic movements of a street where the first thing I saw was a large cart drawn by a small white bull with an excusable hump. His eyes were full of flies. But no sooner did I note the flies than the bull vanished, or became a Chinaman running silently in front of an austere European lady who was perched high on a pair of noiseless wheels.

Then a Chinaman began to run silently in front of me, while I sat behind him much too high on a pair of noiseless wheels watching the dark patch of sweat expand on the back of his shirt; anyhow, I must suppose it was I who sat there. We nearly knocked over a yellow lady in black satin trousers and a blue jacket who was smoking a cigaret.

Next, so far as I remember, there were a great many masters of ships and perhaps as many cocktails. We came to a spacious black and white palace with a myriad of propellers revolving on its ceiling—no wonder I was dizzy—and a string quartet regulated our hunger with dance music, while a regiment of immaculate celestial acolytes accurately guessed our wants.

I remember, that night, a confusion of narrow alleys, where hanging lanterns disclosed endless and aimless torrents of brown bodies. There were the rank smells of abundant life in heat and ferment, and cries and voices without meaning. Above grotesque cornices were the shapes of monstrous leaves blacking out areas of stars.

All this, when I found a bedroom, I tried to resolve into an orderly pattern; but there can be no ordering of the upburst and overflow of life at its source. I gave it up, and watched instead some lizards running after one another upside down on the white ceiling, while they made a noise like intermittent loud kissing.

The Oldest Bank.

Los Angeles Times: The oldest bank in the world is said to be at Barcelona, in Spain. It dates back to 1401, when bankers were mere exchangers of money. The bank of England was not established until 1694, when the Barcelona institution was almost entering its third century. But look at the banks in the world now and see how they are spreading out. Think of the money that keeps them going!

SAYS VICTIM OF ANOTHER

WHY NEILS THURSLAND APPEALS TO SUPREME COURT.

Confession of Man Who Left Mash in Strawstack Did Not Gain Him Liberty at Hands of District Judge.

Neils Thursland, convicted in Washington county on a charge of being in possession of intoxicating mash, says he isn't guilty, and has filed an appeal from the jury's verdict that he was. The court below fined him $500 and costs and gave him thirty days in jail.

The appeal differs from most of the kind. Thursland submitted an affidavit to the trial judge, afetr the jury had convicted him, from one Chris Anderson, which is in the nature of a confession. The evidence that convicted Thursland was the finding in a strawstack on the farm of which he was tenant of a barrel in which a lot of peaches had been fermenting in cold water for several months. Joe Jessen is owner of the farm.

Anderson's statement was that Jessen farm was vacant in February, 1923. He had the peaches and the barrel and he got the water and put the whole mses away in the stack. A little later, when he went back to get the stuff, he found that some one, later found to be Thursland, had moved into the house. He says he left that vicinity in a hurry and several times went back, but never got the stuff.

This did not gain Thursland liberty, however. The court ruled that to convict a man of possession of mash it is not necessary that he be the owner or in permanent possession. If he be but in temporary possession that is sufficient. Thursland had once before been convicted of violating the prohibitory law, and the record indicates that he knew of the peach brew being in the stack.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

The town of Herman, Neb., was struck by a tornado. Reports were that all but two buildings in the town were destroyed and that at least ten were killed.

The hardest fought republican primaries held in Lancaster county for years were ended after a hard days work.

Col. F. M. Woods, after investigating in Rock Island, Galesburg, Indianapolis and other cities farther east changed his allegiance from brick to asphalt for paving.

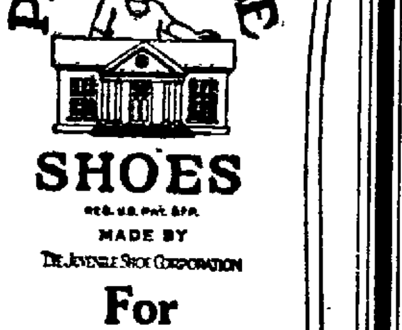

The Lincoln gun club and the Capital city club merged and the result was the new Lincoln Gun club. The old Capital City gun club grounds were to be used.

Miss Pauline Maude Oakley accepted a summer engagement as understudy with the Castle Square Opera company of Chicago.

J. H. Auld of Knoxville, Ia., and W. T. Auld of Red Cloud, were at the Capital hotel. They, with other bankers, expected to open a new national bank in Lincoln with a capital stock of $100,000.

Good Mail Service.

In every bed room of one of the large New York city hotels there is a little semi-cylindrical glass mounted upon the wall opposite the bed. When a letter, telegram or the like is placed in the mail box assigned to any particular room, the miniature lamp behind the glass lights automatically, making visible the message, "Mail in office for you." This light does not turn off until the guest has claimed his mail.

Who They Are.

Elise Duchanier is a beautiful and innocent young girl of gentle birth, who, by misfortune, has sunk to be a dresser in a small Montmartre theater. Elise has the care of a bedridden sister, who is attended by an elderly doctor named Lapierre, who loves Elise. The young girl is dresser to the Parisian star.

Lolette, a gorgeous creature of flaming passions, blazing appearance, and equally glaring morals. Elise's natural modesty and beauty are a thorn in Lolette's jealous side, and the star desires the downfall of her little dresser. Lolette's manager and protector is

Maurice Brunel, the great entrepreneur, while another followed of Lolette is a certain Count Mordac. To this latter Lolette confides the fact that sh is determined to ruin Elise. Elise meets a young American named

Tom Kendrick, whom she at once recognizes as a man of different stamp from the hangers-on of the theater. Kendrick asks Elise to accompany him to a great bal masque and the girl accepts. At this ball, in pursuance of her plan, Lolette induces Elise to dance with her, so that the little dresser attracts the attention of the famous Brunel—the man thru whose hands many beautiful girls have passed.

CHAPTER IX.

The Walls of Reality.

Primrose flooded the eastern sky, touching the spires of Paris with yellow, fairy light, like wistful fingers of hope stretched across the gay city, searching out its darkness and its vice, making more fair its beauty and its splendour.

The myriad lamps at Brunel's dimmed in its radiance. The garish glamour of the dance faded and was stale. The bright eyes were bright no longer. The jewels were dulled beside the sunshine. The dancers drifted away, leaving only the litter and the silence and the desolation, the empty bottles, the broken glasses, the overturned tables and chairs, the scattered confetti and the burst balloons—the stillness, and the nodding secret poplars. Quiet came down on Brunel as tho evil slunk to the shadows, hiding its face, and creeping home to rest for another night.

Kendrick took Elise back to the Rue Jacques. She was tired and the gentle rolling of the great limousine was like the quiet rocking of a baby's cradle set on springs of air. She could have nestled in the corner and slept, but that every moment she was with Kendrick she wanted to keep awake, to watch him, to hear his voice.

He said very little during the ride, and at last the car turned down the narrow street with its high shuttered houses, and pulled up at the entrance to her home.

"Here we are," he said, as the chauffeur reached around and swung the door open. He stepped out in front of her and assisted her to alight, holding her hand for a space, and regarding her with that grave steadiness which she persuaded herself was entirely his own. "And so it must be good night, eh?—or is it good morning?"

"Good morning, I think."

His voice dropped a little. "But not good-bye?"

"Not—unless you wish it, monsieur." Her heart beats suddenly filled her.

He smiled. "Au revoir, then. Until we meet again—little girl."

He lifted her hand kissed it.

In that moment she would have given him her lips, and found all the joy of the world in the giving.

He stood and watched her until she vanished in the forbidding darkness of the building.

Marthe was awake, restless, and a little peevish when Elise reached the room.

"You are late, Elise—later than you said. I have not slept all night."

Elise, with Kendrick's kiss hot on her fingers, with the memory of it and of his look and his words thunderous in her head, found the full flood of her joyousness checked, as tho it had struck some solid, immovable object.

The room looked drear and dull, Marthe's face was pale and wan and drawn, and her eyes fretted. Elise had a sudden impulse to cry, unrestrainedly. Almost she hated herself for the night's unhappiness, for the promise the last few minutes had brought to her.

"Oh, Marthe," she said, "I am sorry, I am sorry. I should never have gone."

"You shouldn't," answered Marthe shortly. "Doctor was here with me, and he said you shouldn't."

Elise undressed. And now she was tired, indeed, and the golden wideness of her vision beautiful was shut out from her sight behind the drab walls of reality.

CHAPTER X.

The Kingdom of the Earth.

Brunel sent for Elise.

It was within two days of the bal masque—a note addressed to her at the little room in the Rue Jacques, asking her to call on him at his office at 11 o'clock on the following morning. At first Elise thought it the preface to dismissal, but realized that there would be no ceremony attached to her departure from the Internationale, and that anything so catastrophic would be accomplished by Lolette in a few pungent phrases.

She found Brunel in his room at the theater, for in building the Internationale he had equipped it with a splendid suite of offices, from which he controlled his various other places of amusement scattered about Paris and France.

"The reason I asked you to come," continued Brunel, the manager, is because I can make your fortune."

It was a large room, long and high, with a great bookcase down one wall and the others oak-paneled and adorned by signed photographs of theatrical celebrities. Brunel was sitting at a great plate-glass topped desk in the center of the polished floor, and he assigned Elise to a seat opposite him.

She was a little apprehensive and nervous, altho her fears were somewhat negatived by Brunel's smile.

"You were at my dance the other evening, ma'm'selle."

"Yes, monsieur."

"And you enjoyed it?" There was a suave benevolence about Brunel which Elise had never perceived before and which struck a discordant not.

"Very much, monsieur."

"Ah! I was watching you, and I thought you did." Brunel seemed to settle himself comfortably, as tho all the preliminaries were got over and he and she were on terms of established friendship. "Now you are wondering why I have brought you here this morning, eh?"

Elise admitted she was. She did not like this treachy amiability.

"The reason I asked you to call," continued Brunel, "is because I can make your fortune."

She stared at him, thinking for a moment he was mad, but realizing immediately that Brunel was not the type to be afflicted with insanity.

"I don't understand, monsieur," she said at last.

"No? And you dance as I saw you dance at my house? Don't you realize that you are wasting your time in a dressing room?"

She hardly dared attempt to grasp his meaning, so incredible was it.

He added: "I have made many dancers—I, Brunel. And I know a dancer when I see one. You think this is all ridiculous?" For Elise's bewilderment was plainly written in her expression. "Regard Lolette! I made her. You look at her cars, her jewels and her gowns. You see her with the world at her feet, wealthy, famous, her name on everybody's lips; and she seems far above you, in the stars, beyond your reach. Yet I can remember the time when she sat opposite me—opposite Brunel—at just such a desk as this and said she was willing to do her best if only I would help her."

Lolette. The premiere danseuse! This man spoke of Lolette, and drew a parallel with herself! Elise felt that her senses were reeling.

She strove to be calm and smiled quickly and nervously. Her fingers were plucking at the vanity bag on her knees. If all this were true it meant wealth. Her imagination was rearing a structure of fanciful intention which reached to the skies. Marthe would be safe, forever. She might even be cured, for the best of medical advice could be obtained for her. There would at least be sunshine and rest for the remainder of her life, attention and luxury and all the comforts money could purchase. Old Doctor Lapiere would be paid in full and over for the service he had rendered. All this, Elise thought swiftly, tumultously, while yet she tried to graps the tremendous importance of Brunel's proposition. She heard Brunel speaking again.

"You like the idea? It appeals to you?"

"Monsieur—I don't know how to thank you." Despite her efforts at self-control, her agitation was plainly visible. "It is a thing of which I never dreamed. You see—when I danced—it was only fun. I never thought there could ever be anything in it."

Brunel nodded. "It is just the little thought—and the opportunity." Somehow, she felt he was measuring her with his eyes, but she hardly heeded it.

She was aquiver with vast excitements, her heart lilted with happiness. She felt as tho the gates of fortune had been flung wide for her, and in this first golden vision of opportunity she was blind to any possibility of failure, realizing that in her heart of hearts the dance had always lured her and beckoned to her, so that now she went gladly in answer to its call.

"The opportunity," repeated Brunel softly.

"It is you who are providing that, monsieur, and I cannot express my gratitude." She could only reiterate her thanks. She felt she wanted time to think, to get hold of the miracle of it all, to look about her and find her footing. She had, in those moments, no definite vision of the future, not the faintest idea that she would ever rival Lolette; but only a hazy perspective of the riches Brunel had mentioned, and, as a song in her heart, the assurance that the drabness of the old days must slip from her like a cloak loosened about her shoulders.

Brunel was still measuring her, and now his eyes were aglow. To her cheeks, born of her excitement, had come a little touch of elusive color, pink merging to marble whiteness, and her eyes were like stars, so that she was filled with radiant life, adorable, alluring. Brunel told himself that even Mordac had never fully appreciated the beautiy of this girl, and Mordac had an eye for those things which were second to none in Paris. He trod carefully.

"As you say, I provide the opportunity. But it is only for those who understand me, whom I understand—who are willing to work with me and for me—well."

"Of course, monsieur." She was eager in almost a childish fashion, simply reassuring. "I know that. But I will work, I will do my best, all my best, always. That would be only due to you, for your kindness."

The pity of this declaration passed Brunel by. He was thinking only of her beauty.

"So! Now Lolette and I are good friends. We always have been—from the first. Lolette is one who sees her opportunities and grasps them with both hands. She is a clever, shrewd woman, as well as a great artist. She realizes that there are certain things which one must accept in life; that good friendship is a thing which tacitly admits of the completest confidence and trust."

"Of course, monsieur," Elise cooled slightly, now, with her brain becoming steadier. She wondered why Brunel thought it necessary to point all this out.

"Now you are not only clever, but you are beautiful — more beautiful than any woman I have ever known." Into Brunel's voice had crept tremor of intense passion, unrestrained. "In your hands I can place riches beyond even those of Lolette. I can set your name above the names of all of them —I can bring the world to your feet." He leaned forward still further, as tho to reach across the resk and clasp her. "Only—there must be understanding and friendship. Is it clear?"

She stayed quite still for an appreciable space, staring straight into his eyes; and as she stared she slowly grasped the enormity of the thing he hinted at, and which he had not yet intended to propose definitely, but which the sight of her beauty had drawn from him. She saw the mark of the beast slumbering in his glowing eyes.

Her breath came in, shudderingly, long. The bloom died from her face, leaving it blanched and cold. Her eyes were wide and stricken.

"Monsieur!" It was protesting, an outcry against the fact that this thing should be, that Brunel could not lend a hand, could not be content to help and advise—without payment over and above the money which must accrue to him from any success she achieved.

"Wishes beyond those of Lolette," repeated Brunel softly. "Beyond your dreams."

She stood up. It was quick, startling. Almost did it seem as tho she would put her hands before her face to shut out the sight of something evil.

"I will not listen!" she panted. "I will not listen. That you could imagine that ever I should agree! That you should insult me so!"

She turned toward the door, and Brunel quickly on his feet, hurried round the desk and held the door open to her. He was quite cool and undisturbed.

"This is rather precipitant," he said gently. "You realize exactly what this quibble is costing you?"

"Let me go—please let me go!"

He stood to one side, and she bluudered past him and vanished down the corridor.

Outside on the pavement she stood humbly, dazed, filled with chaotic emotion, tears trembling in her eyes, her throat dry and constricted. The hopes of the past few minutes were dashed to dust about her feet. The cruelty of it all had stunned her. She had been, that morning, taken to the top of a high mountain and shown all the kingdom of the earth, and then cast down to the bottomless pit because she had turned a deaf ear to the voice of the tempter.

She began to walk home, unconscious of direction or vicinity, stricken and weakened.

When she reached the garret over the Rue Jacques she fell on her knees besides Marthe's bed and Marthe stroked her hair while she cried.

Woman's Secret Charm

In perfect health lies the secret of woman's charm which makes her radiate cheer and happiness wherever she goes. No one enjoys listening to the aches, pains and woes of an ailing, nervous irritable woman, and her condition is plainly stamped upon every feature. The most effective remedy for woman's ailments ever discovered has proved to be Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Women are soon restored to health by its use and acquire the charm that health alone can give.—Advertisement.

SKYLARKING WAS COSTLY

MAN WHO LOST EYE IN HORSE PLAY HAS NO REDRESS.

State Compensation Commissioner Holds That Injury Not Received in Due Course of His Employment.

State Compensation Commissioner Frye held, in an opinion handed down Friday, that Bernard Krueger has no right of action under the workmen's compensation law against his employer, the American Beet Sugar Co. Krueger lost his left eye as the result of some horse play with a friend and fellow worker named Stoell.

Krueger's job was to carry samples of lime mixtures in buckets from where the baking was done, to the chemist. After he had filled his bucket he handed the small paddle to Schoell, who tapped him with it. As Krueger reached the top of the ladder he scraped some lime off his clotsing and threw it at Scholl. The latter tossed another piece at Krueger, which hit him in the eye, resulting in it finally being removed.

Mr. Frye says that he has examined the court decisions and that he must hold that as it cannot be said the accident arose out of his employment, industry cannot be held to bear the burden of it unless the risk was reasonably incident to the employment. It is not a question of the innocence of the victim since it is shown he participated in the lime throwing. It is immaterial if he was the aggressor as it would be in an angry altercation. The conditions surrounding the employment were not conducive to horse play, and the law can give him no relief.

Jesse Bryant, a truck driver for H. C. Nielsen & Son of Omaha was also denied any compensation. His story was that his truck got stalled, and that he was hurt while using his strength to get out of the mud. His claim was that the strain in the muscles resulted in appendicitus. The commissioner says that the weight of medical testimony is that appendicitis cannot be acquired in that way and that as he had it two days after the accident he must have had it previous to it. As the law does not compensate men for disease, his claim is denied.

George Lamb, an employe of the Lincoln Traction company, injured by the explosion of an injection air bottle on an oil engine, is ordered to take further treatment for his big toe to ascertain if his disability is permanent in character. Meanwhile he will draw $15 a week indemnity.

Ethical, legislative and educational questions were placed before the general session of the annual convention of the national association of real estate boards with numerous specialized topics left for discussion by the various divisions of the organization at separate meetings

HER LOVE VENTURE

By Fay Stevenson

Copyright, 1924, New York World (Press Publishing Co.)

The Announcement.

Shortly after she arrived in New York Jane Winslow sent out her wedding cards. The wedding was to be a simple one at St. Thomas' chapel and since Jane Winslow had no near relatives in town her invitation read like that of a woman who is to be be married the second time. It was simply this:

The honor of your presence is requested at the marriage of Jane Winslow and
Mr. George Manton
On Saturday, June seventh, nineteen hundred and twenty-four,
at four o'clock,
St. Thomas' Chapel.

Jane's business acquaintances, especially Lulu Garrison, were greatly interested over the coming wedding. Their opinions were none too optimistic and Lulu emphatically declared many times, "It can never be a success! No business girl of Jane Winslow's ability will be happy with a domestic life and three howling step-children. She'll be back at her desk in less than three weeks and then what will that poor widower do? Well, I did all I could to keep Jane a bachelor girl, and now I'm just going to sit by and watch the split. Three children and nothing to do but stay home! It can't be done."

Even George Manton's friends were none too optimistic over the forthcoming affair. "I don't see why old Manton didn't just marry a plain every-day, stay-at-home girl," said one of his partners. "A talented business girl like that Jane Winslow can't be expected to play the part of wife and step-mother as well as a girl who was just living from her dad's allowance and waiting for some one to come along and carry her off to another home. Somebody ought to put a flea in George's ear. What he needs is some one to mother his kids. Might as well pick out a Follies beauty as a business genius and expect her to settle down to the hum-drum of domestic life day after day."

But Jane Winslow and George Manton heard none of these predictions and if they had they would have considered them all a huge joke. Jane was never so happy in her life to give up her business duties and she shopped about the stores for her trousseau with the care-free, happy manner of a woman who never again had to worry over time and business engagements.

The bride and bridegroom were to spend a short honeymoon in the Adirondacks and then return to the Manton home. In fact, Jane was so anxious to take charge of George Manton's beautiful home and to be with the children that she urged that their stay be but a few days and later they would go to the seashore with the children.

"I think you're fortunate that the housekeeper likes you, Jane," said Manton on the eve of their wedding day. "She told me that if I had married any other woman than you she would have left us and it might just be"——

"Never!" said Jane. "I'm never going back to the business world."

Tomorrow—The Wedding.

DAWES IS CONGRATULATED

Chamber of Commerce Officials Send Telegram to Former Fellow Townsman.

President Cornell and Secretary Whitten of the chamber of commerce sent this telegram Friday to General Dawes: "Your old home town and particularly the old guard, Burnham, Harpham, Raymond, Lau, Robbins, Seacrest, Joyce, et al, and the members of the chamber of commerce, including William Jennings and Governor Bryan, extend their heartiest congratulations on your nomination for the vice presidency of the United States."

Mayor Zehrung will send a message to General Dawes urging that he be in Lincoln July 4. The mayor held a conference on the subject Friday with an American Legion delegation.

TEACHER HEADS WILL MEET.

The national organization of secretaries of state teachers' associations will hold its summer conference in Washington, D. C., in conjunction with the National Education association, June 26 to July 5. The purpose of the meet will be to formulate plans to make the state associations more effective. Everett M. Hosman, of Lincoln, secretary of the Nebraska State teachers association, is president of the national organization of secretaries and will go to Washington for the convention.

The Apes Didn't Like It.

Portland Oregonian: In recent years folks have been slighting the memory of Orpheus with tolerant smiles. Absurd to believe that the wandering Greek ever smote his lyre so felicitously that the beasts left the forest to follow him. A graceful myth, and no more. However, in Los Angeles the other day it was proved that sweet melodies are grateful to ape and tiger and elephant, but that the primitive in them gibbers, howls or trumpets when jazz is inflicted. Jazz they postively do not care for. Jazz excites and enrages these sensitive creatures. They resent it, captives tho they are.

This has the appearance of finality. It indicates, also, that we do wrong to attribute jazz to the jungle. If jazz had originated in the jungle the jungle creatures would in some degree have been inured to it. To jungle music, in its pristine purity, we must have added not a few innovations of our own, since the ape, the elephant and my lord the tiger do not recognize jazz as music. Such a discovery leaves jazz without a leg to stand on, a crippled mendicant supported by a saxophone.

Psychologists have been on the wrong trail. Certain gentry of darkest Africa or equatorial Asia did not originate jazz. Jazz, like home brew, is a distinctively American product.

Coming Back for Revenge.

Berkeley Gazette: The people of California are being warned that our fighting senator has become quite worried over the political situation here and, now that he has no longer to worry about the presidency, he is about to return home and straighten things out. He was, it seems, aroused to the seriousness of the situation in California by his defeat at the primaries. It took that little jolt apparently to bring home to him the fact that has been quite clear to nearly everyone else in California, that his political influence has about petered out.

Leo. A. McClatchy, writing from Washington, says that the senator is going first to San Francisco "to map out his line of attack. Then he will surge forth into a slashing verbal assault against the administration of Governor Friend W. Richardson. With the assault against Richardson will go the appeal to elect a legislature over which Richardson will have no control."

How like the senator! Always looking for trouble; always trying to disarrange government. And what is back of it? Once, we might have thought it was an interest in public welfare; now we can only believe that it is but a deeply-rooted interest in Hiram W. Johnson. Shorn of all possibilities of ever realizing his ambition to be president, he now turns his attention to California — neglected so long in his campaign for national honors.

Long realizing a waning of his popularity and ever fearful of getting out of the limelight, Senator Johnson now proposes to upset the progress made in California since the defeat of his political machine that occurred with the election of Governor Richardson. To be instrumental in the election of a legislature not in sympathy with the Richardson administration and thereby prevent the governor from carrying on his program of economy and efficiency, is typically Johnsonian.

While the senator himself has not announced that it is his intention to attempt to tie the hands of the present state administration, it is safe to say that his plains have been correctly reported by McClatchy, for have not the McClatchys long been the official town criers for Johnson, albeit they have at times spoken or written carelessly or indiscretely, as the case may be, of the plans, the dreams or the fears of the senator?

Then, too, have we not had with us since the political departure of the senator those satellites of the zenith of his power? And, have they not only recently aroused themselves to renewed attacks upon Governor Richardson? After two years, during which every reasonable person in California has been convinced of the wisdom of Richardson's economy program, are we not now witnessing an effort of his political enemies to revive the old and now repudiated charges against the administration? And does not this revival of mud-slinging by Will Wood, C. C. Young, Mrs. Saylor and others of the old guard, presage the return of the "big chief?"

Undoubtedly McClatchy has spoken the truth and we can prepare for the spectacle of a defeated presidential candidate returning to his home state, embittered against the nation in general and California in particular: prepared to make battle against an administration, against which the most severe charge that has been made is, that it has cut down the cost of government at the expense of the office-holder.

We predict an even greater surprise in store for Hiram Johnson than that doled out to him at the presidential primaries.

A Winter Resort.

"Mamma," said Archie, "do all wicked people go to the bad place?"

"We are told so, dear."

"Aren't some people wickeder than other people?"

"Yes, I suppose they are."

"Well, I think the people who are not so very, very wicked ought to go to the bad place only in the winter time."—Boston Transcript.

David City Colored Man Gave Away a Small Fortune After a Useful Life.

DAVID CITY, Neb., June 13.—The will of George Mattingly, aged and highly respected colored man of Butler county, which disposes of approximately $50,000 worth of property, has been filed for probate in this county. The will is of considerable length and makes a number of bequests aside from providing for the payment of all debts, funeral expenses and expense of administrating the estate. Besides these it makes the following provisions:

To the pastor of St. Mary's Catholic church, David City, officiating at the funeral, $500.

To Rev. Father J. C. Caraher, a former pastor of St. Mary's church, $500.

To Rev. aFther O'Connor, a former pastor of St. Mary's church $500.

"I have no child or descendants, but should any person or persons establish such relationship, to each of such I give and bequeath $1.00.

To Josh Coleman and Blanche Coleman, his wife, the residence where he was living and where Mr. and Mrs. Coleman were keeping house for him.

For a siutable monument at his grave $100, the monument to be placed within one year.

To C. W. Bennison the sum of $100, to be invested by him as trustee, the income thereof, perpetually, to go to upkeep of grave.

C. W. Bennison and I. T. McCaskey are named as trustees to execute the following trusts:

Payment of $10,000 to Joseph Mattingly, son of a half-brother of the father of George Mattingly.

Payment of $10,000 to Elias Mattingly, osn of a half-brother of the father of George Mattingly

To C. W. Bennison and I. T. McCaskey in equal shares, the remainder of the property.

Date of the will is March 24, 1924. Witnesses to the signature of Mr. Mattingly are C. O. Crosthwaite, R. G. Rich and E. E. Stone.

Value of the estate is estimated at $48,500. The estate includes an 80-acre farm five miles south of David City and land in Colorado.

The Breath of the Avenue

—THE MAJESTIC sailed into New York harbor last week and several important Fashion trends came with it.

First

The new silhouette for hats promises to be higher square crowns, straighter brims. These new hats don't want to even insist that they are distant cousins of the cloche. Some of the crowns are severely square, others are softly squared, if you know what I mean. And the trimmings—most trammed at high centre front. Tailored bows often used. Feather fancies conspicious.

Second

Plaids are significant as I told you already last week. They combine many colors in interesting ways. Featured for details of linings and revers on coats, and for the entire surface on top coats, and for tailored cloth dresses

Paris uses plaids for trimmings, and a plaid scarf is the smartest of all scarfs now

Third

White and yellow arrive for summertime wear. The yellow used at the Country Clubs is a deep rich golden yellow, sometimes used alone—oftener in combination with white

Fourth

Features of summer dresses include

—Pleating and flounces for afternoon and morning wear.
—Stripes in silk sports dresses.
—Fringes and chenilles on sports dresses.
—Lace trimmings on formal and informal dresses.

How to Bob

—Feminine and fashionable New Yorkers wear shingle bob. Charles of the Ritz, Alexander of the Ambassador and Peter of the Netherlands agree that the hair must be modeled closely to the head. The new shingle is of subtle curves and softened angles without abrupt lines.

—It may be swirled as Antoine of Paris does it.

—It must be parted mostly at the side, sometimes at the center. Whenever it is it is softened by a slight bang.

The wave of the new bobs is large and loose.

And for today I must stop I must shop for others.

INDIGESTION TORTURED MRS. LONG FOR YEARS

Omaha Woman Was In Wretched Condition Until She Took Tanlac.

"The excellent health and strength I enjoy is every bit due to Tanlac. For four years, this grand medicine has been my faithful standby," is the high praise accorded the famous treatment by Mrs. C. H. Long, 2604 Ellison Ave., Omaha, Nebr.

"For years, I suffered torture from indigestion, nervousness and sleeplessness. I never enjoyed a meal or had any appetite for anything and when I first took Tanlac in 1917, these dreadful troubles had pulled my weight down 25 pounds and had taken away nearly all my strength.

"Tanlac certainly saved the day for me. It ended the indigestion, quieted my nerves, brought back my lost weight, strength and color and all my friends spoke about the wonderful change in me. Since then, I have used Tanlac with equally as good results, after the grip and flu, and I prize it above anything."

How to Win New Hand-Beauty by Shaking Your Own Hands

By LUCREZIA BORI
The Famous Spanish Prima Donna

IT is in the everyday movements such as walking, sitting, standing, running and bending over that real grace counts.

Rhythm of movement is a delightful thing to behold. Any woman appears more lovely if she knows how to handle herself easily and gracefully.

This does not mean drawing-room and ball-room grace. It means grace in every single movement that you make all day long, whether it be lifting a book from a table or hanging a dish-towel upon the rack beside the sink, or arranging flowers in a vase, or opening your typewriter desk.

This is why I do not consider it necessary to do elaborate exercises or difficult rhythmic dances in order to be really graceful.

The thing that is needed is limberness and ease and an ordinary understanding of the muscles which control your various movements.

For instance, the baby just learning to walk does not understand his muscles. He has not used them enough to become familiar with them so he can co-ordinate them, which is what we do unconsciously every day.

This accounts for his awkward, faltering steps and his expression of pleasure and daring. He is trying something which he finds difficult, and the experiment is more fascinating to him than any new toy that a fond parent can bring him.

If more grown-ups felt this same sensation in perfecting their movements and imparting grace to them, we would have more examples of easy movement, of the rhythmic grace that is a pleasure to watch.

Do you ever stop to wonder if your own movements are smooth and free and graceful? Have you sometimes caught a glimpse of yourself in the glass as you made some stooping or reaching gesture, and felt discouraged because you did not appear more graceful?

For instance, all women know that hands must be well-cared-for if their possessor wishes to appear at her best. Do these same women stop to think that hands must be well handled, too, if their beauty is to come up to its full measure?

I am going to give you a simple exercise which is very good for your hands because it limbers them up and thus enables you to use them more easily.

The exercise is this:

Stand or sit in an easy position, holding your chest and your chin in.

Have your elbows slightly out from your body and bent, so that your hands are held loosely in front of you, with the wrists very limber.

Now shake your hands holding them altogether limber from the wrists so that your fingers fly loosely in all directions.

This will limber them wonderfully and beauty of movement will follow more naturally.

YOUR HEALTH

Make Sure Today That Your Child Sees Well

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

DR. COPELAND

ONE-QUARTER of the pupils in schools have defective eyesight.

A few weeks ago the newspapers carried a report made public by the Eyesight Conservation Council of America. It revealed the startling fact that one out of every four school children throughout America has bad eyesight, or at least is suffering the effects of eyestrain.

The United States Commissioner of Education, who is a member of the council, declares that defective sight is an important factor in accounting for the backwardness of many pupils.

I regret I have not at hand the statistics of a survey we made in the public schools of New York City. After the discovery of the eye defects and their correction by appropriate glasses, it was little short of marvelous how rapid was the mental progress of the children. In a few cases children soon skipped classes, and all of the treated children showed improvement in their studies.

It is unfair to a child to permit him to suffer the humiliation of being called stupid when, as a matter of fact, the poor little chap can't see.

This statement reminds me to say that every backward child should be given careful medical examination. There may exist some trifling defect, something easily removed, and when it is banished, the erstwhile stupid child may become a leader in his class.

At birth the eye is small, too short for perfect vision. As the body grows the eye grows. Eventually, if fortune smiles, the eye becomes just the right size and shape to afford perfect sight. Unfortunately, in some instances, the eye may be distorted in shape or it may overdevelop. In the one case there will be astigmatism, and in the other there will be near-sightedness.

Just as there are few persons who are absolutely perfect in form and feature, there are few eyes that are perfectly normal. But how are you to find out that your eyes are abnormal?

If you have always had poor sight, you just accept your condition as being all right. You may wonder why a friend can read a sign or tell time by a distant clock. But if you consider the matter at all it will probably not occur to you that your eyes are bad. You will conclude that your friend is a "freak."

Periodic physical examinations are desirable for old and young. Certainly the school child should be looked over at intervals to make sure, among other things, that the sight is good.

Our most precious possessions are our eyes. We should not abuse or neglect them. We should choose our reading material and our place for reading with the greatest care. Good light, good print and good hours will perpetuate good sight.

Answers to Health Questions

Q. C. L. Q.—Will it injure the system to take pure turpentine for a cold?

A.—Pure turpentine will probably injure the system and I do not advise it.

J. N. M. Q.—I am on a diet and eat a lot of fruit. Are fruits, such as oranges, apples, lemons, etc., fattening?

2.—Will peroxide and lemon juice bleach out freckles, and should it be left on all night?

A.—No.

2.—Equal parts of lemon juice and peroxide will make freckles less noticeable. Yes, it should be left on the skin until it has been absorbed.

A READER. Q.—I am suffering from tuberculosis and have been taking the rest cure for about two months. My sputum seems to have changed from gray to a yellowish color. Is this a sign of improvement?

2.—Can a tubercular patient who has had no cavity in the lungs become perfectly well and strong, as though he had never had the disease?

A.—The fact of the sputum changing color does not indicate anything.

2.—Yes, provided he carefully follows all the instructions while he is under treatment for the trouble.

MRS. V. M. B. Q.—With what can I wash my eyes three or four times a week without hurting them?

2.—Will rubbing the wrinkles on my forehead and around my eyes with olive oil benefit them?

A.—Boracic acid is a good eye wash.

2.—I do not advise you to put any oil on your wrinkles. Rub them gently with only the tips of the fingers for about fifteen minutes daily.

THE VERY NEWEST INSET FROCKS

Charmeuse Combines Its Dull and Shiny Sides in This Frock.

This White Chiffon Shows Red Coin-Dots and an Inset That's Pleated.

To Give Ample Width for Walking, Insets Are Now the Thing

By ANNETTE BRADSHAW

FROCKS for Summer wear, whether they be of satin fabric or some softer material, are made with sufficient fulness at the front to provide ample width for walking and to give a smart decorative touch as well.

The two models shown above are examples of the frock for afternoon wear.

The one at the left is of black charmeuse and shows its shiny side at the front, with the dull surfaces at the sides and back. There is a set-in belt showing the dull side, and gathers extend just across the front. Bright touches of color are added in suede flowers appliqued flat against the belt at the front.

The frock at the right is of white chiffon coin-dotted in red. It is simply made, an amusing little pleated inset adding its touch of fulness at the front. The wide sash of the material ties over the hip.

Another effective way of adding fulness about the lower part of the frock is by means of the V-shaped inset, some frocks showing as many as three across the front width.

Good Night Stories

DORIS MAKES A COMMON MISTAKE.

DORIS gave a cry of delight when she saw the beautiful butterfly light on a blossom beside her.

"Oh, you pretty thing!" she exclaimed, and made a swish with her hat. But the butterfly spread its wings and sailed to another blossom.

"I'm very glad you like me, but I don't care to be caught under your hat. Besides, I'm on a big mission this morning and I don't wish to be detained. Oh, here comes my mate," as another, smaller butterfly settled by the side of the first.

"I suppose that's your wife," laughed Doris. "She's pretty, too."

"No," laughed the first butterfly, "I'm the wife and this is my husband. You see in our tribe of butterflies the female is much the larger."

"Isn't that funny!" said Doris. "Well, anyway, you both are beautiful. I love the reddish shade of your wings, and above all, the pretty eye-spots on your hind wings. Goodness, you have five eye-spots on each wing, haven't you? Don't you wish they really were eyes?"

"No, indeed!" laughed Mr. Tawny Emperor Butterfly, for that was his name. "We can see pretty well as it is. But Mama Butterfly, have you noticed your eggs this morning?"

"I was just on my way to the hackberry when Doris delayed me," replied Mrs. Tawny Emperor Butterfly. "Maybe she would like to go with us."

"Perhaps she's not interested in butterfly eggs," laughed her mate,

"We Can See Pretty Well."

"Just because you and I are interested is no sign that everyone else is."

"But I am interested," said Doris softly, "and I'd love to see your eggs."

"Then let's go," laughed Daddy Tawny Emperor Butterfly, and he and his wife flew low and so slowly that Doris could keep up with them until they reached the hackberry bush where the eggs were laid in clusters, one row piled on top of the other.

"You wouldn't believe it, but there are almost five hundred eggs here. It's been just a week since I put them here and they are beginning to push up their caps," laughed the proud mother butterfly.

As she spoke, the wee eggs began to open and out crawled tiny little caterpillars. They all gathered on a big leaf and began eating as if they were starved. As they moved around they would each spin a silken little web.

"After they have moulted for the third time," whispered Mother Tawny Emperor Butterfly, "they will be about an inch and a half long, of a light green color. They will be a queer set of caterpillars, for the hind ends of their bodies will be forked and on their heads they will carry tiny antlers.

"When they are full-grown caterpillars they will change into pale green chrysalises striped with yellow. Early in the Summer they will come forth full-fledged tawny emperor butterflies."

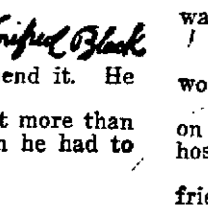

"And a family to be proud of," laughed Doris. "Do you keep guard over them?"

"Gracious, no!" laughed Mr. Tawny Emperor Butterfly, while Doris watched the funny little caterpillars collected on one leaf, eating greedily.

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT The Beauty Gone to Work

Copyright, 1924, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Winifred Black

THE cattle king's heiress—out in California—is tired of society.

She's young and she's beautiful and she's clever, and when she married the man who owned millions of acres in California and millions in Mexico and millions up in Oregon and had money enough in the bank to buy ten thousand herds of cattle, if she wanted to do it, everybody smiled and said:

"Well, the money has come into the right hands at last.

"The old man who made it didn't know how to spend it. He lived like a ranch hand and he died like one.

"He never in his life wore a suit of clothes that cost more than twenty-five dollars, and he felt like a spendthrift when he had to pay more than ten dollars for one—at that.

She "Followed" for Years

"He wore high boots and a broad hat, and he'd rather have ham and eggs for dinner than anything the best French chef in the country could think of to cook for him."

Not that he ever had a French-chef—he didn't.

He had a plain old ranch cook and that was that.

He didn't care for the theatre and he wouldn't have sat through an opera if you'd paid him a thousand dollars a minute to do it.

He wasn't much of a reader and the two things he really knew were grazing land and cattle.

He knew so much about these two things that he rose from a butcher's boy to a multi-millionaire, and the greatest fun of his life was to sit down and tell you how he did it.

And now he is gone and his heir married the Beauty and everybody was delighted to have her marry the money as well as the man behind the money.

Light-hearted, quick-witted, generous, of exquisite taste—here was a chance to see money go as it ought to.

And for a few years the Beauty followed programme.

And then all at once here she is announcing that she's going to work.

And she's opened a shop—a darling little, smart little shop on a smart street—and she's going to sell frocks and hats and smart hosiery and things.

And the queerest thing about it is that two of her very best friends have gone into business, too.

One of them is a landscape gardener, and the other has opened an interior decorating and antique business and is doing mighty well at it, too.

And all Society is staring and wondering.

I don't see why.

It's the war and what happened during the war—and that's that.

The One Real Pleasure

Don't you remember the old-fashioned man who used to drive a high-stepping pair of bays and whenever he got to a certain point in the drive he always looked right between the horses' ears and said:

"Isn't it lucky these horses don't know their own strength? If they did, you couldn't keep them harnessed for five minutes."

That's what happened to the women who never before worked in their lives.

They went into the Red Cross and into the Overseas League and into the cantonments, and they found out that just about the greatest fun in the world, after all, is the fun of pitting your brain against the world and wresting success out of failure.

The women of the world who never worked before have discovered that work is the one real pleasure that really lasts—and they're not contented to flutter around like a lot of idle butterflies any more.

Don't be too hard on them, Mr. Man. What would you do if someone told you that all you would be allowed to do the rest of your life was to dress and go to parties and spend money and be—"beautiful"?

Home women have always worked and they're always going to go on working. What this lonesome old world would do without the home woman no one even dares to guess. But the idle woman, the parasite, she's gone out of the fashion—entirely out.

I wonder if she'll stay.

MY HUSBAND'S LOVE

Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

Why Katherine Worried About Madge's Trip with Mamie.

"BUT, Madge," Katherine expostulated, when I had finished telling her of the fur cloaks that Katie, at Mamie's behest, had hidden in our attic unknown to me until her conscience had prompted confession, "I don't see how you dare drive to New York alone with that girl! She looks sullen and desperate enough for anything. How do you know that in some lonely part of the road she won't hit you over the head?"

"Because she's too afraid of my reporting her possession of those coats to the police," I answered with more confidence than I really felt. "She bluffed just as long as she could, but she was very much frightened when she thought I was calling the chief of police."

"But she's had time to think things over since," Katherine argued, "and while I don't want to frighten you, yet she certainly looks to me as if she were plotting something behind that stolid face of hers. I wish you'd turn the cloaks over to the police here and be done with the thing."

"Think a minute, and you'll see why I can't do that," I said, and she looked at me comprehendingly.

"Yes, I see," she said. "You don't want to be mixed up with the thing out here in this 'small town' atmosphere."

"Exactly," I admitted. "And then besides——"

I stopped short, and Katherine looked at me inquiringly.

"You see," I explained lamely, "I'm not so sure that those cloaks were stolen, after all."

"Not stolen?" Katherine retorted incredulously, but careful as I was to keep her voice below Mamie's hearing. "Why! what other answer can there be? No girl like Mamie could have any other reason for possessing that many coats of the value you say they have."

"I know," I returned, regretting my admission, for I had said no word to Katherine of Mollie Fawcett, and my belief in her rectitude. "It was simply a foolish hunch of mine, but it makes me doubly anxious to get the cloaks to New York and Lillian, especially as she already has an investigating eye upon the Marks family."

"But Me No Buts."

"Yes, Lillian will be able to straighten things out if anyone can," Katherine said. "If—you reach her. Truly, I'm fearfully worried about your going alone with that girl. Isn't there some man you can get to go along with you?"

"No one," I returned a bit slowly, for Katherine's reiteration of possible danger was beginning to get on my nerves.

"I know I'm being officious," she said with no little pique in her tone at the annoyance I had betrayed. "But you can't offend me by getting cross. I'm going to nag right along this line. What's the matter with Jim?"

"Nothing," I returned with a [illegible] little smile, "except that Jim can't get away. Jerry Ticer would have to come over to do the farm chores and with his curiosity and Katie's garrulity, I might just as well publish my errand in the village newspaper."

"Yes, I suppose you're right," she admitted reluctantly. "But——"

"'But me no buts'," I quoted with sudden forced gayety. "I'll manage somehow, never fear, if I have to drive with one hand while I hold Mamie at arm's length with the other. But—I don't want to talk any more about it."

"All right." Her acquiescence was as ready and cheerful as if she were in perfect agreement with me instead of thoroughly disapproving of my course.

A Significant Question.

I could not so easily rid myself of her unspoken objections, however. I knew what she was thinking, and the knowledge made me uncomfortable all through my hurried preparations for the journey to New York which I had made with one eye watchfully fixed upon Mamie.

I had planned to time my journey so that I would arrive in New York about nine o'clock, when the amusement-seeking crowds were all settled in their various theatres and dance-halls. I meant to drive slowly, because I knew that I would have to watch Mamie continually, even though I would not admit to myself that I took Katherine's fears seriously.

She said nothing more until Jim having returned from the garage where I had sent him to stock the car with gas, oil and water, and to have the tires tested, I picked up the heavy suitcases containing the furs, and started for the car with them. Taking one from my hand, and lowering her voice to a whisper, so that Mamie stalking in front of us, might not hear, she said tensely:

"Madge! Haven't you anything with you with which you can frighten that girl if she gets unruly?"

Three-Minute Journeys

WHERE MAIDS AND MISTRESSES ARE SOCIAL PALS.

MAJORCA is a beautiful island. It has cathedrals older than many on the Continent, castles on rocky summits that withstood the attacks of Moorish pirates, and harbors whose picturesqueness cannot easily be forgotten. And yet, beautiful and conveniently located as it is, Majorca has been neglected by tourists.

Majorca is the largest of the Balearic Islands off the southern coast of Spain and is a province of that country. It has not, however, borrowed from Spain many of her customs. Majorca, in other words, is not a mirror of Spain, as detached provinces sometimes are, but—Majorca. Her people have remained simple and her standard of living is correspondingly free from the frills of her mother country.

The nobility, aristocracy and peasantry of Spain, for example, have little meaning in Majorca. The mayor and fishermen are pals—play, perhaps, in the same town band—and even the maid and her mistress are friends. The mistress does not feel that she is on a higher social plane than the woman she employs to help her in her household duties. Indeed, the servant is very apt to be a daughter of an official in the town who is of much more importance than the master of the house in which she works. She is, therefore, looked upon as a friend or a member of the family and treated with the proper respect.

A Majorca Maid and Mistress.

However, few families enjoy the luxury of employing a servant. Majorcans are hard working people and the women, for the most part, do their own work in their homes and gardens. The gardens are lovely. There are olive trees over a thousand years old, fig and orange trees galore and grape arbors shading the roses.

Perhaps some day Majorca will win the fame its beauty deserves.

THE HOME KITCHEN

By JEANNETTE YOUNG NORTON
The Authority on Home Cooking

Solving the Problem of Varying Veal Dishes Deliciously.

IN purchasing veal from your butcher it is well to remember the whiteness of the flesh is a mark of good quality. Only the meat of a calf over nine weeks old and milk-fed should be purchased. Meat taken from a younger calf is not wholesome.

Veal is not considered as nourishing as beef, and the meat does not keep as well owing to its high content of water. The choicest roasting-piece is the fillet. There is excellent stewing-meat and in a young animal all of the joints cook well. The loin makes an inviting roast when it is well cooked. The shoulder, boned and stuffed, is also good for roasting.

Veal sweetbreads are always a delicacy and they can be cooked in a number of attractive ways. The liver known at the early age of the animal as "milk liver," is very delicate when broiled, fried with bacon, cooked en casserole, cooked in the oven stuffed and rolled, boiled and formed for canapes, hash, or croquettes or moulded in meat jelly for a cold dish. Sometimes the liver is cooked with the kidney and curried, a favorite English dish, then served with rice.

Veal cutlets are daintiest when broiled, but they may be fried, stewed in milk and served with a cream gravy, or cut into narrow strips, breaded and fried, then dressed with a tomato sauce.

Brain Fritters.

Blanch a pair of brains in cold water for ten minutes, then put them on in cold salted water to parboil. Let them boil twenty minutes. Blanch them in cold water when they are done, remove all the fibre and chop them coarsely. Make the usual fritter batter. Season the brains with pepper, salt and the juice of an onion, then beat them into the batter. Drop them by the spoonful into hot fat and fry them a delicate brown. Drain them and serve them with tartar sauce. Garnish them with sprays of fresh parsley and lemon quarters.

Sauced Calf's Head.

In buying the whole head, the brains may be used for the fritters, the head may be boiled until the meat is done, then the bones should be removed and thrown back into the stock with the usual vegetables added. When done they are strained out and the seasoning is added, after which the soup may be used clear with a jellied garniture or with soup dumplings. The meat may be sliced and served in a rich caper sauce, a tomato sauce or a good curry sauce. Or the meat may be chopped coarsely and put into a flavorful aspic jelly and moulded to slice cold. The mould should be decorated with hard-boiled eggs cut in fancy ways, sliced truffles, stoned olives and a few capers.

Calf's Head Pie.

Line a buttered, deep dish with good crust. Cut the cold, cooked meat into small pieces and arrange in the dish with sliced hard-boiled eggs, a finely-minced onion and a cupful of cold, boiled ham cut into small pieces. Make a little savory stuffing, roll it into balls and tuck it in. Season the meat with pepper, salt, a saltspoonful each of curry powder and sugar and the same of mace and finely powdered sage. Pour in a cupful of soup stock, dredge the dish with a little flour, put on the top crust, leaving a vent in the centre, and bake the pie about an hour in a moderate oven. Cover it for the first twenty minutes, so that the crust will not begin to brown until it is cooked. If the pie seems a bit dry, a little hot stock or cream may be poured in through the vent before it is done.

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl in my teens. I am very fond of a young man about my age.

I live about forty miles from the town where he lives and I do not see him often. Is it all right to call at his home when I am visiting relatives in the same town?

Q. T.

Q. T.: I suggest you telephone the young man and let him know that you are in the city. If he wishes to see you he will make all arrangements. You should not visit his home unless you receive an invitation from his parents.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I've been keeping company with a young man for almost nine years. If things keep on that way I think I'm not really fair to him to take up all his time. I've often told him he should go with some other girl—he might have a better time and may find someone else better than I. He says often he loves me and I know I do him, but I get blue sometimes and wonder how it is all going to turn out. Shall I just have patience?

YOURS TRULY.

YOURS TRULY: Aren't you taking the wrong attitude entirely, my dear? Perhaps the young man has no intention of marrying you at all. He may consider you merely a pleasant companion. In any event, you are not engaged and there is no reason why you should permit him to monopolize all your time. Go out with your other friends and do not make him the center of all your hopes and plans.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

SATURDAY, JUNE 14.

The planetary configurations for this day point to certain abrupt and possibly radical departures or upheavals. There may be sudden moves or a journey and these should eventuate successfully if precaution is exercised against deceit or betrayal. The financial outlook is favorable, but those in the employment of others should be careful not to jeopardize their positions. In domestic, social and affectional affiliations things may be expected to be lively and happy.

Those whose birthday it is are likely to have a year of sudden and unplanned developments. There may be important change or travel, and these may be undertaken with the prospect of financial success if only there be precaution against fraud or treachery. Heart and home affairs should thrive and be pleasant. A child born on this day will be fond of change and travel, and will be successful. It will be popular.

MANY CARS GIVEN TEST

BRAKING POWER ON 40 PER CENT MARKED EFFICIENT.

Unusually High Average of Good Brakes Shown on Cars in This City, the Testers Report.

More than 1,200 cars have been inspected in the free brake testing that is being conducted on Q street this week. About forty per cent of the brakes have passed the requirements for proper brake adjustment and the drivers are entitled to display an O K. sticker on the windshield. This is a high average of good brakes, according to those in charge of the inspection. The greatest number of defective brakes for any single day of the inspection were found in the tests made on Thursday. Nearly five per cent of the cars inspected on that day had no brakes and the number of poor adjustments ran higher on that day.

Fleet owners in Lincoln keep their trucks in good condition. So far only three trucks, out of nearly two hundred tested, have had to have brakes adjusted. One owner of a fleet of twelve trucks came out of the inspection with all twelve O. K'd.

Practically all of the taxi-cabs that have been tested have been O. K'd.

Women drivers of Lincoln have been commended repeatedly for the interest they have taken in the campaign. They persist in having tests made until the car is finally O. K'd.

Saturday is the last day of the campaign. Tests will be made from 6 o'clock until 8 o'clock on Saturday evening in order to give opportunity to all drivers to have brakes inspected. Those who are planning auto tours are especially urged to have the tests made because fines are assessed against bad brakes in many cities in the east and in the west. The public has been requested not to try their brakes on the course on Q street unless a mechanic is on the car. This request has been made to avoid accidents. Traffic has interfered with the tests, considerably, and all drivers and bicycle riders have been requested not to use this street during the day, if it can be avoided. Inspection has been delayed by rain but on the whole it has been a very successful campaign.

LOTTERIES THRIVE IN BRAZIL.

RIO DE JANEIRO (By Mail).—The lottery business continues to flourish in Brazil where failures in almost every other line are numerous. Hundreds of thousands of dollars change hands daily. In fact, depreciated exchange and bad business conditions have strengthened the lottery business, and practically everybody in Brazil, from the $10 a month chambermaid to bank presidents, dabble in the gamble. There are hundreds of shops occupying the choice business sites in Rio where lotery tickets are the only stock handled, and new shops open almost every week. These lottery shops, with their carved hardwood counters and walls, mosaic floors and gilted cashier's cages, lead strangers to believe them to the the city's banking institutions.

PREPARES FOR AIR CONTESTS.

DAYTON, O., June 13.—Arrangements are well under way here for the annual International Pulitzer air races, to be staged at the Wilbur Wright field in October. Several hundred airplanes, capable of going at a speed of 250 miles an hour will compete for prizes aggregating $50,000. All highways and streets between Dayton and the field are being paved and 800 regular soldiers from Jefferson barracks will act as special patrol during the events. Dayton business men have subscribed $250,000 for the initial expenses of the races.

GIRLS ENJOY CAMP LIFE

About 400 Campfire Girls in First Delegation at Camp Crete on the Blue River.

CAMP CRETE, Neb., June 13.—The first real summer day since the opening of camp was a pleasant surprise to the 400 girls here, and the first swimming class aroused so much enthusiasm that most of the girls were late to dinner. Community singing was inaugurated at 2:30 Thursday afternoon, when the officers were introduced and announcements made. Boating and canoeing took up the early part of the evening, after which the girls danced in the pavilion until 9 o'clock. Blue ribbons to the winners in the boating tests were awarded in the evening.

BLIND WORKERS ELECT HEAD

NEBRASKA CITY, June 13.—Dr. Claire Owens, graduate of the school for the blind and prominent Geneva woman was elected president of the Nebraska association of workers for the blind at the continued sesions of their tenth biennial convention here Thursday. H. J. Gierau is retiring president.

Programs were held all day Thursday. A special memorial service was dedicated to thelate Professor Edwin C. Cook, for twenty-nine years instructor at the school and a tablet was unveiled to his memory in the main hall of the school. Later the delegates went to Wyuka cemetery, where short exercises were held at his grave.

Supt. N. C. Abbott, of the local school, sponsored a drive for visitors over the city this afternoon. Among the points of interest visited was the Arbor Lodge state park. R. B. Irwin, national president, has an active part in the sessions.

NEBRASKA NEWS.

Stella—Funeral services for Dr. Isaac L. Callison, pioneer of this county who died at Lodge Pole, Neb., Monday, were held here Friday. He is survived by his wife and a son.

Nebraska City—Fifty members of the Presbyterian Westminster Brotherhood met in a reorganization meeting here Thursday. Rev. Fr. Steen of the First church at Auburn, delivered the address. A dinner was served the group by the woman's society of the church.

Nebraska Man's Promotion.

NEBRASKA CITY, June 13.—A. M. Calhoun, recently advanced to the position of vice president of the Kansas City & Southern railway, also assistant to President Edson of that road, is a former Nebraskan. A son of the late S. H. Calhoun of Nebraska City, he was born there May 1, 1871. He entered railway service in 1890 and for six years was clerk in the superintendent's office of the Missouri Pacific at Atchison, Kas. During the next few years he was clerk to the claim agent of the St. Louis Southwestern at Pine Bluff, Ark. and Tyler, Tex., chief clerk to the superintendent of the Kansas City Southern at Pittsburg, Kas., claim agent to the same road at Texarkana, Tex., chief clerk to the general storekeeper and clerk to the general manager of the Denver & Rio Grande at Denver and chief clerk to the general manager of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton at Cincinnati. From 1905 to 1910 he was chief clerk to the president of the Kansas City Southern at Kansas City and from 1910 to 1924 assistant to the president of the same road and also assistant to the president of the Texarkana & Fort Smith. Several days ago he was made vice president of the Kansas City & Southern and assistant to President Edson.

BOBBED HAIR AND BEAUTY

By Julia Hoyt.

An argument to my mind in favor of the bob is that it obviates hair arrangement. Except for the cutting of which I will speak later, one's hair needs only to be brushed and smoothed into place, with an occasional marcel if one has it marcelled. Few women are clever at arranging their own hair. The bob, having done away with the clumsily wrought knot in exactly the wrong place, the many strange and unmeaning puffs dotted around the head and the untidy strands of hair straggling down the neck, has to my mind improved the appearance of the head of the average woman.

To return to the question of the actual hair cut, there are three things to be considered—first and foremost the shape of your head; and second the texture or quality of your hair; third and whether you are going to wear it straight or marcelled. How you shall wear your hair is decided by the shape of your forehead, the type of your face and the general style you affect.

The shape of your head affects only the way your hair is cut in back and on top, and not the front arrangement. For instance, if your head has a tendency to be flat in the back the hair should be cut very short at the base of the skull and left a little longer at the curve of the head, in that way helping to give a rounded effect. In addition it should probably be waved to prevent its lying too close to the head. I haven't the space or the imagination to take up all the problems offered by different heads, but a good rule to follow is to press your hair as close to your head as possible and study it well, remembering that the thing to be desired is a small and as nearly round a head as possible.

If you went into the famous Antoine's salon in Paris you would see him studying one woman after another; first the shape of the head, then trying different front and side arrangements, studying all the time their profiles, full face, figures, every thing which indicates their type. His respect for the great beauty of thick hair is so little that if he sees that its thickness in some spots is hiding a well-shaped head he will cold-bloodedly thin it out until it seems as if he was removing all the hair. Naturally he only does this with a well-shaped head and in cases where it is necessary. Also it is dangerous unless done by the hand of an expert.

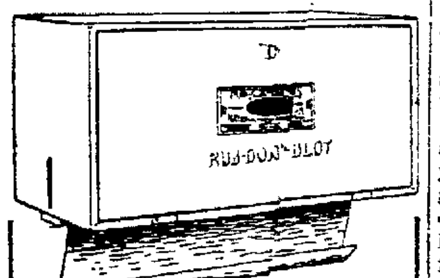

I am told that many women in Paris are beginning again to show their ears. Some years ago there were all sorts of rumors about a famous beauty, Clio de Merode: that she had been born without ears, that they were deformed, etc.—all because she was the first woman of that period to cover her ears. New we speak of showing them as an extraordinary and revolutionary fashion. Ears that are little and well shaped and pink (of course a little rouge can accomplish the latter requirement), are charming, but in general I cannot see that they are much of a help to a woman's looks. However, it may be entirely a question of eye training and we may all grow to admire them hugely if the custom of showing them really returns. For some reasons I rather doubt it, for in my opinion showing the ears demands that one should have an extremely good profile and an unusually good hair line, and even then it is not always becoming. Short hair is unquestionably comfortable and while it is not becoming to all, neither were the different ways of arranging the hair. I think it has improved the appearance of the average head and I believe the bob has come to say.

MODERN CLEANERS

Public Service Towels Are

SANITARY—Made from clean, fresh spruce wood, to pulp, to paper, to package right in the mill. No old newspapers or other waste paper go into their manufacture.

STRONG—Rub-don't-blot. That's the natural way to use a towel. Public Service towels dry your hands, but they don't rub up like a blotter and leave disagreeable bits of paper all over your hands and face.

ABSORBENT—In Public Service Towels strength is combined with absorbency in just the right proportion. They take up the water but by rubbing, not blotting.

ECONOMICAL—Only one towel at a time can be withdrawn from the cabinet. And because you can rub, instead of blotting, every towel goes further. Also, there's double fold hem where the wet hand takes hold to pull each towel from the cabinet, an exclusive Public Service feature. This prevents tearing. Tests by school departments, factories, office building managements and others have proved these the most economical and satisfactory individual towel service available.

Good Health In Happy Old Age

THE chief concern of elderly people is their health, and that is best assured by regular daily bowel movement. There is no truth, however, in the notion that because you are old you need a "strong physic." In fact, just because you are old a mild laxative is better for you. The trouble with purges and cathartics and physics is that they shock the system and weaken it and make the muscles of digestion flabby. Dr. G. H. Brown, V. S., of Frederic, Wis., nearly wrecked his stomach with purgatives. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin restored his health, as it did Mrs. J. S. Etheridge's, of Milledgeville, Ga.

Does Not Gripe

You can be sure of satisfactory evacuations every day if you will take a spoonful of Syrup Pepsin at night when you retire. You will not need to take it very long as a few doses will soon encourage the bowels to act for themselves. The popularity of this wonderful family remedy has become so great that it is now the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. Because of its mildness and freedom from griping it is especially ideal for the extremes of ages, for children and for elderly people.

Effective at Small Cost

Get a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at any drug store. The formula is on the package, and the cost less than a cent a dose. Take it when you feel heavy, sleep poorly, have headache or night cramps, for these are also symptoms of constipation. Give it to the children when they are restless, feverish or have a cold. Syrup Pepsin will keep you and the family free from constipation, a condition that lowers the vitality 25 per cent and raises the blood pressure 28 per cent. Freedom from constipation lessens the pain of kidney trouble, neuritis and rheumatism.

WILL DAWES STAY PUT?

BELIEF OF FRIENDS HE WILL UPSET PRECEDENT.

If Elected to Vice Presidency, "Hell and Maria" Will Probably Be Unwilling to Stay Out of Sight.

CHICAGO, June 13.—Will Dawes stay put? This was the question asked today by friends of Brigadier General Dawes, nominated vice president last night by the republican national convention. The belief of his friends is that Dawes will not stay put.

They predict something new in the way of a vice president. Dawes is too energetic, explosive and plain speaking to be content with the cloistered seclusion traditional of the vice presidency.

Dawes was born in Marietta, O., August 27, 1865. His father was Gen. Rufus Dawes, commander of the iron brigade of Wisconsin in the Civil war.

After being graduated from Marietta college, Dawes entered the Cincinnati law school and graduated in 1886 with the degree of LL.B. He was then twenty-one. In 1887 Dawes went to Lincoln, Neb., where he practiced law. Some time later he went to Wisconsin and engaged in business. He was head of the La-Crosse Gas Light company for a time. Then he moved to Evanston, Ill., Chicago suburb, his present home.

Dawes entered politics in 1896 when he won the recognition of Mark Hanna by forcing the Illinois delegation to go to the republican national convention instructed for William McKinley. In 1898 Dawes was named United States comptroller of currency and held that office until 1901. In the following year he organized the Central Trust company of Illinois. He is still chairman of the board of directors of that institution.

When General Pershing took his army to France, he called on Dawes to run the service of supply, a highly complicated and difficult undertaking. Dawes upset all sorts of rules and slashed miles of red tape.

Some time after returning to this country, he was called before a congressional committee investigating alleged extravagances in the conduct of the war. Dawes shriveled the investigation and the investigators as he strode up and down the room and shouted:

"Hell 'n Maria. There are too many pinheads throwing mud. If you men would spend more time trying to stem the millions of waste going on under your noses, we would have a hell of a lot better government."

He made a few more blistering remarks on the subject of extravagances at home, and in 1921 congress created the budget bureau and gave Dawes the job of running it.

He left the bureau at the end of that fiscal year and returned to Chicago.

Last winter he came out of retirement and headed a committee of experts to determine Germany's ability to pay reparations. He threw himself into this task with his usual energy and kept on the job almost night and day until a report on the situation was completed.

Dawes has written several books on finance and has published one song. He is an accomplished musician and frequently composes songs for his own amusement. Also, he is something of a poet.

In 1889 Dawes married Miss Caro D. Blymyer, of Cincinnati. They have one daughter. A son was drowned in Lake Geneva, Wis., in 1912.

CONDEMN ALL WARFARE

Delegates of Christian Churches Also Endorse Dry Laws at Convention Session.

AURORA, Neb., June 13.—"We utterly condemn militarism, wars of aggression and secret diplomacy," read a part of the resolutions adopted by the state convention of Christian churches in session at Aurora Thursday. Advocated as a part of the same resolution the committee in charge suggested that a certain day be set apart for the teaching of the principles of permanent peace with the ministers of every denomination cooperating in the work.

Another section of the list of resolutions adopted by unanimous vote read: "We recommend that the officers of this convention be authorized to send a resolution thru Milo J. Smith asking the national democratic party to include in its platform a plank supporting the eighteenth amendment and all laws supporting it."

Over three hundred delegates, representing fifty-seven Christian churches of the state are registered at the convention.

CLAIMS LARGE SUM DUE HER

Sister of Bankrupt Seeks Reimbursement in District Court.

NEBRASKA CITY, June 13.—Mrs. Iola H. Hanks, sister of Gilbert Hanks, bankrupt, told the district court here Thursday that there is due from her brother's estate a sum approximating $90,000. Mrs. Church says the money was lent to him on deeds and mortgages which were not filed for some time after the instrument was executed. She said she had no knowledge that the documents, held inescrow, had not been filed until told by her attorney. The Hanks estate alleges that the transfers were made to protect Gilbert Hanks against creditors in Nebraska City and Otoe county.

Mrs. Church is represented by E. J. Furkett, of Lincoln. Pitzer & Tyler are attorneys for A. E. Stocker, trustee in bankruptcy, and L. F. Jackson is counsel for Hanks.

MUCH DAMAGE FROM RAIN

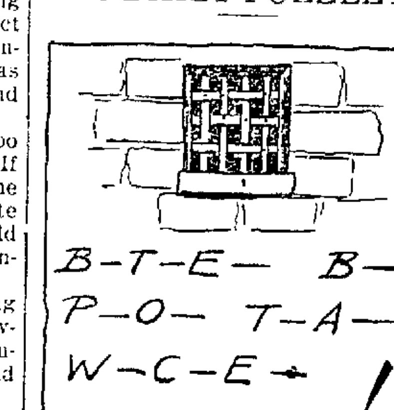

Nebraska City Vicinity Suffers Loss From Thursday's Flood.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., June 13.—Additional evidence of the terrific deluge that visited this vicinity early Thursday morning appear on every hand. Show tents of a carnival company playing here were wrecked, as well as a tent used by a minstrel company that opened Tuesday at Julian.

Ninety per cent of the toll lines were out of order most of the day, according to the wire chief of the Lincoln Telephone & Telegraph Co. Cellars of the Otoe Mercantile Co., Otoe Blau-Gas Vo and the Ed Booth shoe store were flooded and stock stored there damaged. Water was also washed into the Goff grocery at the foot of Fourteenth street.

Damage to bridges on Otoe county roads will amount to thousands of dollars, according to H. C. Schwaderer, supervisor. All streams, including North and South Table creeks in this city, were out of their banks. Telegraph service was disabled here for a time.

FIGHTING BOLL WEEVIL.

AMERICUS, Ga. (By Mail).—The greatest boll weevil control campaign ever organized in Georgia is now being waged in Sumter county. George O. Marshall, county farm demonstration agent, is directing an educational effort directed especially toward negro farmers who are being impressed with the necessity of poisoning cotton fields thoroly and early. The so-called Leloach plan is being given a country-wide tryout here, and it is believed a normal pre-weevil cotton yield will be secured this fall in the county. Every farmer in the county, wil be supplied with sufficient calcium arsenate and modern dusting machines to apply the poison.

DOUMERGUE IS ELECTED

PRESIDENT OF SENATE NOW PRESIDENT OF REPUBLIC.

Defeats Paul Painleve in Balloting by the French Deputies and Senators—Police Guard Place.

VERSAILLES, France, June 13.—Gaston Doumergue, president of the senate, was elected president of France by the national congress here today.

Doumergue defeated Paul Painleve, president of the chamber of deputies, 515 to 309.

The new president succeeds M. Millerand, whose resignation was forced by the left parties following the recent parliamentary elections.

Doumergue had the support of the bloc national (the Poincare coalition) as being the least radical of the candidates put forward by the Left.

His election was expected and is more or less satisfactory to all the elements concerned, altho there was bitter debate among the more radical of the left parties, many of whom favored Painleve, or former Premier Briand.

Conservative support put Doumergue in office, the Poincare elements feeling he will not go to extremes in forming a socialist regime.

Election of Doumergue on the first ballot was forecast freely.

Police took every precaution to maintain order as the deputies and senators assembled.

LATE NEWS OF YESTERDAY

SPANISH WAR VETS HERE

Over Two Hundred Registered for Encampment—Campfire Held Thursday Evening.

Over two hundred Spanish war veterans from over the state, in Lincoln for their seventeenth annual convention, gathered at a "campfire" in the ballroom of the Lincoln hotel Thursday evening for a social time.

An informal program was given by the ladies' auxiliary to the William Lewis camp. The Electa quartet consisting of Mrs. Orville Andrews, Mrs. Louise Mitchell, Mrs. E. B. Boyles, and Mrs. Augusta Baer opened the program with three songs: "Out of the Dust," "Sunny Boy," and "Jack and Jill." Dorothy Orcutt gave a dance and Miss Iris Ludden played two piano solos entitled "A La Bien Aimee," and "Impromptu." Miss Pearl Cosgrave gave a reading, "A Big Mistake" and Doris Antles whistled "Lassie o' Mine" and "The Birds' Ball" after which Miss Arlene Orcutt gave a reading entitled "Little Orphan Annie." Mrs. A. B. Weel had read "The Old Family Group," and Mrs. George C. Aydelott sang "Smile of Spring," by Fletcher accompanied by Leland Wood. The program closed with "Annie Laurie" sung by the Electa quartet.

This was the first meeting of the encampment, the afternoon being spent in registering the veterans who were delayed by the heavy rains. At first it was feared by the officials that the heavy rains might detain many until Friday but over two hundred names are now on the roll and others will arrive Friday morning. State Commander Burr of Omaha arrived Thursday evening and Division President Lilah I. Tucker and Division Secretary of North Platte arrived Thursday afternoon.

LUTHERANS ELECT OFFICERS

Rev. M. N. Andreasen, Cedar Falls, Ia., Heads the Danish Church of America.

FREMONT, Neb., June 12.—Rev. M. N. Andreasen, Cedar Falls, Ia., was today re-elected president of the Danish Lutheran church of America, at the annual election of the twenty-eighth convention of the organization now in progress here.

Rev. N. F. Carlson, Royal, Ia., was chosen as vice president, with Rev. A. W. Lund, Minneapolis, secretary, and Otto Fansen, Blair, as treasurer. Rev. Andreasen was elected president on the second ballot.

I. Vedsted, Staplehurst, Neb., and C. D. Skev, Racine, Wis., were the lay members appointed to the church board. The election, usually held on the last day of the convention, was moved forward this year to permit more time for the business sessions.

The Danish church of Clifton, Ill., and a church at Redvers, Alberta, Canada, were accepted as members of the Danish Lutheran church organization of America.

Miss I. Olafson, secretary of the young women's Christian association activities in Scandinavia, is scheduled to deliver an address before the convention Friday evening.

STORM DID SOME DAMAGE

Trees Uprooted, Cellars Flooded, Wire Service Interrupted by Wind at Nebraska City.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., June 12.—Light and telephone service is paralyzed here as result of the most severe electrical and wind storm in years which struck this city early this morning and continued unabated for nearly two hours. Trees uprooted, cellars flooded and wires pulled down. Two cables in the eastern part of the city were damaged by lightning and moisture. Two hundred telephones are out of commission.

NEBRASKA NEWS.

Nebraska City—One of the heaviest and most destructive rains of the season struck this community late Tuesday evening and Wednesday morning. The precipitation increased north of the city where a small cloudburst was reported. A few miles south of here there was but a light sprinkle.

Nebraska City—Martin Schmidt, sixty-one years of age, one of the best known farmers in southeastern Nebraska, died Wednesday at the home of his son at Sterling, Ill. He spent the most of his life on a farm near Paul, Otoe county. He is survived by a wife and two sons, one of whom lives in this city.

Beatrice—Members of the Beatrice Municipal, Fairbury and Wymore bands paid tribute here Thursday afternoon at funeral services held for the late M. F. Radebaugh who died suddenly Tuesday morning. The various musicians furnished music at the funeral services held from the First Christian church. Mr. Radebaugh was a member of the Beatrice band for over thirty years.

Columbus—Claiming that they owed her $50 more than they were entitled to as attorney fees for services rendered in an estate matter in Kansas, in which she inherited $1,267.64, Mrs. Arthur Aorni has filed suit for $50 in county court against C. J. Garlow and Grover Long, members of the firm of Garlow & Long.

Columbus—Dr. James F. Jenkins, Chicago official inspector for the American college of surgeons, yesterday inspected St. Marys hospital here, reported that he was well satisfied with the inspection and placed it on an A class for the year in the A class classification of hospitals rated by the college of surgeons. The A class is the highest that can be given any one of the larger hospitals in the country.

Columbus—A petition has been filed asking that Mrs. Anne Swanson be appointed administratrix of the late Peter N. Swanson, whose death occurred last week. The estate is estimated at $25,000. The heirs are the widow, four sons, a daughter and one grandchild.

Beatrice—Miss Anna Mumford, [illegible] who recently celebrated her eighty-second birthday here Thursday morning

MERE MENTION.

Albert Shemeley filed a divorce action against Emma Shemeley in the district court Thursday afternoon charging extreme cruelty and desertion. The couple were married in Lincoln, May 9, 1921. She abandoned their home January 10, 1922. There are no children.

Governor Bryan went down to Palmyra Thursday afternoon to fill a date to speak at an old settlers' picnic. He was due at 1:30, and called up the committee during the morning to tell them he would have to wait for a train in the afternoon at 4 o'clock. They told him he was billed for an early talk. Thereupon the governor, with visions of a muddy journey ahead, oiled up his trusty auto and started.

The city's financial statement as of the close of business of April 30, shows the treasurer to be charged with $944,594.15 accounted for as follows: Kountze Bros., New York fiscal agents, $5,906.37; First National Bank, $171,036.27; City National, $130,000; Central National, $130,000; National Bank of Commerce, $130,000; Lincoln State National, $120,000; Nebraska State, $100,000; Continental State, $100,000; Normal State, $7,500; cash, checks, drafts and warrants in safe, vault and drawer, $50,151.51.

A. J. Morris and others have filed with the council request for reconditioning of the alley between Worthington and Twentieth and north of South street. It is alleged that nine automobiles in as many garages face a ridge of earth thrown out upon a once good alley thru the period of construction of a church. Petitioners say they have taken the matter up with people of the church and with Commissioner Cowgill without result. They ask that the alley be repaved with cinders and put in the same condition it once was in.

W. L. Gregory, secretary of Woods Brothers companies, has filed with the council request for repeal of the ordinance creating paving district 501 and creation of a new district in the same territory but embodying some change. The district as created contains the following: Van Dorn, Eleventh to Twentieth; Eighteenth and Nineteenth, Van Dorn to High; Otoe, Seventeenth to Tewentieth; Pawnee and Dakota, Seventeenth to Twentieth. It is urged that the new district consist of the following: Van Dorn, Thirteenth to Twentieth; Otoe, Pawnee and Dakota, Seventeenth to Twentieth and Twentieth, Van Dorn to High.

RESTAURANT KEEPER SUED

Mrs. Ruby Pearson Demands $5,000 for Injuries Alleged Due to Beating.

Mrs. Ruby L. Pearson filed a damage suit for $5,000 against John Gikas, restaurant owner, in district court Thursday afternoon for personal injuries sustained in an alleged attack made by him June 10, while she was working in the kitchen of his restaurant. She states that on June 10, a piece of ice fell from the ice box to the floor and that the defendant became enraged and accused her of breaking a crock the day before. He set upon her, she alleges, and beat her and subjected her to vile oaths and epithets.

Mrs. Pearson alleges that her husband is a wounded veteran and she is obliged to help earn their living. This, she claims, brought her into the Gikas kitchen as an employe.

DISOBEY A COURT ORDER

District Judge Released Them and Supreme Court Now Asked to Punish Them.

W. M. Peebler, guardian named by the Nuckolls county district court for John B. Jones, incompetent, is seeking the support of the supreme court in an effort to secure from Dessie P. Allen and Elmer B. Allen, all of the securities that he says belong to Jones and which they admit they have in their possession, claiming them as their own.

Peebler tells the supreme court that the Allens appeared before the probate judge, and admitted they had the papers with them. He ordered them to turn them over, but they paid no attention to the judge, who thereupon convicted them of contempt of court and ordered them confined until they had purged themselves of contempt.

The Allens appealed at once to the district court, where the judge said the proceedings of the county judge were irregular and did not properly charge an offense. He discharged the Allens from custody. It is from this decision that Peebler appeals. He insists that the Allens ought to be compelled to either purge themselves of contempt or produce the securities. He says that this is only a civil contempt proceeding, and that he is appearing only to uphold the dignity of the court. He insists that there is too much disrespect for and disregard of court orders now, and that this case calls for summary action in order that the people may understand that when a court makes an order it must be obeyed.

Killed by Explosion.

TABLE ROCK, Neb., June 12.—Clarence Albright, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Albright of Gotebo, Oklahoma, who lived for many years in Pawnee county, was accidentally killed by the explosion of an engine which he was running for a crew of men, who were drilling for oil near his home. He was thirty years of age and is survived by a wife and two children.

Tax Violators Heavily.

BEATRICE, Neb., June 12.—With several defendants yet to be tried, County Judge Messemore has so far collected $1,250 from the sixteen offenders taken in recent liquor raids here. Several men have pleaded not guilty to their charges and will go to trial June 16. The fines assessed ran from $100 to $600 and costs.

ICE MUST TAKE THE BLAME

Road Condition, Not Negligence of Missouri Pacific, Cause of Hickey's Death.

Ice in the road that caused Edward Hickey's car to skid fifteen feet and bring up on a railroad track was the proximate cause of Mr. Hickey's death, and not any negligence on the part of Mr. Hickey or his son or the Missouri Pacific, Judge Munger ruled in directing a verdict for the railroad company.

The plaintiff had charged an unsafe degree of speed at the crossing, in its petition, but because counsel said in the opening statement, and again during the taking of testimony, that this charge would not be pushed the court ruled that it could not be considered. As to the failure of the engineer to sound the bell or whistle on approaching the crossing, Judge Munger said such failure would not be grounds for recovering damages, because it had been shown that Ralph Hickey, driving the car, saw the train when he was within twenty feet of the crossing, and would have stopped his car but for the ice that caused it to skid. Thus the engineer's negligence, had it been proved, would not have been the proximate cause of the accident. The court held similarly with regard to any negligence of the two Hickeys in failing to see the train while some distance away.

The direction of the verdict followed seven hours of argument between William Patrick for the plaintiff and Yale Holland for the defendant.

BANKERS IN LEGAL FIGHT

Two Arrayed Against Two in Contest Over Claims Against a Farmer.

An appeal was filed with the supreme court Thursday from the holding of Judge W. E. Stewart of the Lancaster district court that the Oak Creek Valley bank of Valparaiso and the Saunders County bank of Wahoo were entitled to have their judgments for $7,184 and $3,275 satisfied out of the property of Jess Hudgkins, a northern Lancaster county farmer, who borrowed those sums from them. He owns a farm estimated to be worth $25,000 against which stands a first mortgage of $8,000, due the Lincoln Trust company.

It was the contention of the two banks that Hudgkins, in order to defeat their recovery from him of what was due them had entered into a conspiracy with John L. Winters, the Farmers and Merchants bank of Wahoo and the Farmers & Merchants bank of Ceresco, by which he had given the latter a mortgage of $6,685, which if enforced, would mean their judgments would be worth little or nothing. The defendants insisted that the mortgages were given to take care of current indebtedness and not to defraud, but Judge Winters held against them, and gave the other two banks priority.

MISSION SOCIETY DINNER

Lincoln District Women Holding Annual Convention Session at St. Paul Church Today.

The Lincoln district Woman's Home Missionary society held a banquet at the St. Paul Methodist church Thursday evening with over 150 members present. Mrs. L. E. Hoover presided. The program consisted of a vocal solo by Miss Bess Gliesburg of Seward, accompanied by Miss Julia Bruce. Miss Anna Barnett gave a reading, followed by a talk, "A Good Aerial," by Mrs J. A. Murray. After this, Miss Nina Butler played a flute solo, accompanied by Miss Marie Lessenhop.

Following the banquet, two new Queen Esther circles from the Elm Park and Pleasant Dale churches were introduced, after which the group repaired to the church auditorium where many took part in a pageant entitled "The Vision." This pageant was presented by groups from all of the Methodist churches in the district.

Various countries of the earth and the states of the United States were represented. Mrs. H. P. Shepherd, the messenger of evangelism thru various methods and means took the message of Christ to these countries.

The Rev. W. A. Albright offered the opening prayer, after which Mrs. M. Westfall sang the "Old Rugged Cross" and Mrs. E. L. Forney sang "My Task." The Baptist colored choir sang several selections and the pageant closed with the hymn, "In the Cross of Christ I Glory," sung by the players. Benediction was given by the Rev. W. J. Woon.

The pageant was under the direction of Mrs. Ada C. Malcolm and the committee on arrangements was: Mrs. O. H. Hackman, Mrs. Alice Nye, Mrs. Otis Strickler and Mrs. W. H. Myers.

PEOPLE YOU KNOW.

Forty relatives and friends witnessed the marriage of Miss Josephine Weatherhogg daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Weatherhogg of University Place to Homer Barger, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Barger of Beatrice, which took place at 8 o'clock Thursday evening at the home of the bride's parents in University Place. Rev. A. E. Chadwick read the marriage service. Preceding the ceremony Irwin Dunlap sang "At Dawning," accompanied by his mother, Mrs. George Dunlap. As the bridal party entered he played as a violin solo, the bridal chorus from Lohengrin, and during the congratulations "Flower Song" from Faust. Following the ceremony Mr. Dunlap sang "Because." The ceremony was performed before a bank of ferns, peonies and roses. The bride wore a gown of white crepe satin and a veil of embroidered tulle with a cap of orange blossoms. Her shower bouquet was of bride's roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs. W. A. Aden, a sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Her gown was of orchid voile over pink organdy. She carried a corsage of pink roses. Jeanne Barger and Jean Dorothy Gray acted as flower girls. They were dressed in white and carried arm bouquets of Ophelia roses. Dale Shearer acted as best man. An informal reception followed the ceremony. Miss Lillian Kiersey and Mrs. F. S. Gray assisted in serving and Miss Ruth Alabaster had charge of the guest book. After a short wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Barger will make their home in Beatrice.

Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Allen entertained at dinner Thursday evening honoring their niece, Miss Marylouise Bryan and her fiance, Ernest Harnaberger. Pink was the predominating color in the appointments. A basket of pink peonies formed the centerpiece on the dinner table at which twelve guests were seated. Mrs. Richard Hargreaves of Hollywood, and Mrs. Silas Bryan of Minneapolis were out-of-town guests. Mrs. Silas Bryan arrived Thursday morning and is a guest at the executive man-

TO WHITEN SKIN WITH LEMON

The only harmless way to bleach the skin white is to mix the juice of two lemons with three ounces of Orchard White, which any druggist will supply for a few cents. Shake well in a bottle, and you have a whole quarter pint of the most wonderful skin whitener, softener and beautifier.

Massage this sweetly fragrant lemon bleach into the face, neck, arms and hands. It can not irritate. Famous stage beauties use it to bring that clear, youthful skin and rosy-white complexion; also as a freckle, sunburn and tan bleach. You must mix this remarkable lotion yourself. It can not be bought ready to use because it acts best immediately after it is prepared.

Arnold Coming to Close Deal For Lincoln Ball Team

ARNOLD TO CLOSE DEAL FOR SOLONS

Californian On Way to Lincoln to Complete the Negotiations to Take Lincoln Crew in Tow.

President Tearney expects to be in Lincoln Tuesday to confer with Larry Arnold, new Lincoln club owner. Plans are being made to make the game with Des Moines Tuesday, June 17, a bumper day for Lincoln baseball. Bill Lelivelt, secretary of the club, is expected in Lincoln Friday afternoon to iron out the affairs of the club.

ST JOSEPH, Mo., June 12.—"Am leaving California Friday at noon for Lincoln Will close deal upon my arrival there—Larry Arnold"

That message was received by wire by Western league magnates, who are in session here today in an effort to make disposition of the Lincoln franchise Arnold is a Sawtelle, Calif., man. He has not had any previous professional baseball experience but has played and managed in leading semi-pro circles in California.

Associated with Arnold will be Josh Clark, who formerly managed the old Sioux City club. Clark will handle the reins of the Lincoln club and will also have a share in the stock With Clark familiar with the Western league conditions and Arnold to furnish the cash with which to purchase new talent, and he has intimated that he intends to open his purse strings, immediately the league magnates expressed the opinion that Lincoln would not be long in rounding together a formidable aggregation considering that the Solons already have some good material.

A. R. Tearney, league president, did not make the purchase conditions public, but stated that Arnold and Clark would take care of all deficits incurred thus far this season. "A wonderful break for Lincoln. Arnold is young, about twenty-eight years old, has money and is wild about baseball and anxious to take over the Lincoln club," said President Tearney.

"Say for me that we'll have the Solons in there scrapping in a mightly short time," was Clark's joyous remark. He was present at the meeting, when Arnold's wire was received. "Have been looking forward to getting hold of the Lincoln club for some time and have some fast players in mind who will have in the fold before long," he added. The Omaha and Tulsa clubs were not represented. Those present at the meeting were: President Tearney; Clark; Frank Isbell, Wichita; Milton Anfinger, Denver; Lee Keyser, Des Moines; Jack Holland, Oklahoma City; E B. Tracey, president, and Warren Giles, business manager of the St. Joseph club.

LITTLE LESSONS IN Baseball

What is a good batting position for a beginner to adopt?

Answered by
STANLEY HARRIS.

Playing manager, Washington Senators. Known for his keen knowledge of baseball strategy.

I advise every beginner to use his natural batting position even tho it may have a weakness. In time opposing pitchers will usually pitch to this supposed weakness so much that the batter will get a great deal of practice and he will acquire the art of hitting a ball that was formerly impossible for him to hit safely.

Confidence without any fear is a great tonic while at bat.

WILLS FINDS MADDEN A GAME FIGHTER

Some sport writers were not satisfied with the "class" which Harry Wills, negro heavyweight boxer, showed in his bout with Bartley Madden. The opinion is Wills will have to win a decisive victory over Luis Firpo, the Argentine scrapper, in order to get promoters sufficiently excited to go thru with any match in the future with Jack Dempsey, the title holder.

Emory Snort And His Boy Steve In Bid For Western League Holdings

SMARTVILLE, Neb., June 10, 1924.—Sport Editor, Lincoln, Neb.—Dear Sir: I see by the State Journal that the Lincoln ball team ain't got any papa any more and all I got to say is that if them guys want to get down to business and get their stuff down where it belongs they can do business with me in four minutes and believe me it Steve and I take this works over we will run it till them wheat sacks look like powder puffs.

I ain't no hand to be running another guy's stuff down in making a trade but you can see yourself that they ain't got much left but a nucleus for a team and that's what they had when they started so that I ain't going to let a nucleus either way stand in the way of a trade, of course I know that there is a lot of material in them bleachers that can be used for hay racks and it looks to me that the way them birds are running things now they will be able to cut a good crop of hay off of the diamond by fall.

Now right at the present time I am a little short on ready cash but I can always dig it up if I have to, but if them club owners want to take in a piece of western Kansas farm land I will try to deal with them. This is a fine farm only about an inch and half on the map from a good town, is all tillable and some of it is farm land, good rich deep soil in one or two places and just rolling and rocky enough for good pasture, there was a good clear cool stream of running water on the place before the handle broke and that could easily be fixed, so that don't amount to anything. this was one of the best improved farms around there, good barn and house and almost new when they burnt down so that will give you some idea of what kind of a place this is and not just trading stuff for income property, mules, autos or what have you like so many of these farms that you can't rely on what they say. This place is all clear outside of a first mortgage due July first for $1,800 and a second mortgage of $3,800 that my brother-in-law holds and some taxes it is a clean as a gopher's tooth, now here's the idea on a cash price this place is easily worth twenty-five or forty dollars per acre but on a trade if they get their stuff down right I will put this place in at $100 per acre which would make $16,000 or a total of $22,600 and if they want to give me $1,180 in first division jack, I'll deal but I don't want them running in any busted bats or leaky belly pads if we make a deal. Another thing I ain't figuring on be any angel or Santa Claus.

Yours,
EMORY SNORT.

P S. If they decide to go ahead on this I wish you would find out wether or not Jim Beltzer found that ball they lost last year.

Second P. S. I am to reserve all oil rights on the above.

Cream of America's Track Stars to Try for Olympic Team—Winners Will Go to Paris.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 13 —In the olden days the Greek, or it may have been the Roman, mothers used to tell their sons as they went to war "Come back with your shield, or on it"

In just this spirit some 400 of America's finest amateur athletes gathered at Harvard stadium today for the final track and field tryouts which will determine which of the 400 are fittest to wear the shield of the U. S. A in the Olympic games at Paris.

Perhaps the penalty of failure is not so severe as in those old Spartan days but the competition is as keen

Towering, muscular young men from the west coast are pitted against the strongest and fleetest of the east in unofficial but well recognized competition such as always develops when athletics from these sections meet.

The sky was overcast, with possibility of showers later in the day. This was the only drawback, for all of the cracks from coast to coast have shown up in good shape and there will be no excuses—only a few regrets, after the Olympic selections committee has chosen tomorrow night the team that will said for Paris on Monday.

Norfolk Wins over Cardinals

NORFOLK, Neb., June 13. The Elkhorns defeated the Cardinals here on a muddy field by a score of 1 to 0 Thursday. Johnson's two base hit in the sixth inning followed by Bruskie's sacrifice and a thrashing single clinched the game for Norfolk. The outfield was very muddy and fielders created a sensation by spearing hot balls by wading in mud.

Will Coolidge Tame His Rebellious Followers?

You will surely wish to read this week's issue of THE LITERARY DIGEST, on the news-stands to-day. The leading article presents the record of the President and his party in the present Congress. The strange sight of a party leader whose party majority in Congress has done so many things he didn't want done, and refused to do most things he wanted done, is rendered stranger by the fact that the success of the Republican party in the fall elections hinges upon its support of this same chief. This article shows the subject from all angles, including also the opinions of Democratic newspaper editors. Public opinion East, West, North, and South is represented. While the Raleigh News and Observer declares that "the propaganda to make Coolidge better than his party is well greased and well oiled," the Philadelphia Public Ledger, believes that "the country has discovered that Coolidge's stock is not in the show-windows, but that it is sufficient to meet all demnads on it."

But this is not the only news-feature in THE DIGEST this week that will challenge your attention. Among some of the others are:

A LAUGH A DAY KEEPS THE DOCTOR AWAY!

A smile is the golden key which unlocks the hearts of humanity but a laugh is a tonic for the individual health. It stimulates the spirits and purges the system of the poison of depression. Gladness supplants dejection, sunshine shuts out gloom. It makes the heart throb a little easier and the stomach assimilate food faster. Laughter builds stronger bod tissues and FUN from the PRESS is the all-American prescription for laughter. It contains the cream of the chuckles from newspaperdom. The cleverest jesters and jokesmiths from the ends of the earth contribute their happiest foolery. There is a snicker with every flicker of the film—enough mirth for two laughs every day—and a fresh supply at your neighborhood theater every week. As a final [illegible] FUN from the PRESS is created and compiled by the expert editors of The Literary Digest. At good motion picture theaters everywhere. Distributed by W. W. Grover Holds Saints to Five Hits, But Solons Lose

SOLONS OVERCOME BY NARROW MARGIN

Errors in Final Frame Cause Lincoln Crew to Lose the Final Game of Series to Saints.

ST. JOSEPH, June 12.—Errors by Gunther and Snyder handed the Saints the deciding game of the series today, 6 to 5. The veteran "Bugs" Grover went the entire route for the Solons and held the Saints to five hits. Four of them were doubles, however, and all figured in the scoring. Lincoln broke a four run tie by scoring in the eighth inning. Hamilton's resounding triple to left and McDonald's lucky single, with Grover going smoothly, it seemed the run would stand up. Demaggio was a source of trouble to Grover and all afternoon led off the Saints. In the ninth inning he batted his second double to left center.

Gilbert sacrificed down the first base line and Gunther dropped Grover's assist. Gunther then threw the ball toward the pitcher's box but nobody was there to receive it and it rolled to the grand stand as Demaggio scored and Gilbert reached second. Nufer sacrificed Gilbert to third. Gilbert took a long lead off third and Snyder attempted to pick him off but his throw was low and went into left field, Gilbert scoring the winning run.

The Solon's first four runs were produced by sound hitting. Grover connected for one of the longest home runs of the season here, clearing the right center field fence in the third inning to tie the score at one run. Singles by Moore, Gunther and Caffey with two down in the fifth gave the Solons another run after the Saints had added two in the fourth. McDaniels' circuit drive over the right field score board with McDonald on bases gave the Solons a 4 to 3 advantage in the sixth, but the Saints tied the score in their half of the inning.

What the World Court Is.

The senate committee on foreign relations has finally got around to the world court proposal and judging from the number of individuals and organizations who desire to be heard on the subject, a major fuss is impending.

It becomes increasingly dificult to understand what this great to-do is about. The world court is not a very grave issue, one way or the other. Entry into the court involves the taking of no particular risk. Neither, on the other hand, does it hold out the promise of any millennium. The world court is nothing more than an efficient piece of machinery for the settlement of juridical disputes between nations on the basis of international law and treaty law. It happens in its origin to owe something to the league of nations. That fact has no consequence for the merits or defects of the court, whose sole difference from The Hague tribunal, which no one has ever thought to be in the least sinister, is that it is better. But it is also absurd to make large claims for the court. It will not do away with war and it will not underwrite peace. It will help in the peaceful administration of international affairs, in so far as they are concerned with questions of law and not politics. And there is no reason why this government should not avail itself of the advantages of membership, such as they are.

LADIES' NIGHT

Blowing Three-Footers.

The semi-final championship matches are thirty-six holes, eighteen in the morning, starting at 9:30 and eighteen in the afternoon, beginning at 2.30. Secretary Merle Rathburn has extended a wide-open invitation to everyone interested to come out and follow these matches.

Karl Bock, Happy Hollow golfer, considers Jack Pollard "his boy." Pollard, a quiet youth who seldom speaks, seemed considerably more interested in setting forth the reason that Cedar Rapids high school has gone so far in interscholastic sport just before starting his afternoon play against Slattery, than he was in whether he would come thru or not. He began as a caddy and his playing attracted Bock's attention. He has been helping him and coaching him. "I'm just here for the experience," Pollard insisted. Possibly it is this attitude that has carried him so far against players of vastly more experience. He is a junior in high school.

The time schedule for Friday:

8:15 a. m. finals, out state flight.
8.30 a. m. finals, president's flight.
8.35 a. m. finals, secretary's flight.
8:40 a. m. finals, vice president's flight.
8.45 a. m. finals, directors' flight.
9:00 a. m. finals, consolation flight.
9 30 a. m. first half, semi-finals, championship flight.
2 30 p. m. second half, semi-finals, championship flight.

Joe Tucker, Lincoln city champion fell before Dr. L. L. Nelson, Norfolk, in the second flight, when the latter ran a twenty foot put on No. 18. They came up to the home hole all square.

Modern Judges

Los Angeles Times: A Los Angeles judge the other day decided a wife might attend two dancing parties a week without giving her husband ground for complaint. Another must decide whether the cleverness of a husband who hid under his wife's bed and imitated a mouse—by noises not merely by appearances—has justified his spouse in demanding divorce. It also has been decreed by a local jurist that a wife has a perfect right to "nag" at her husband for picking his teeth at the table.

Judges nowadays simply have to be up on everything. They have to tackle problems which have confounded Blackstone and made Marshall run home to consult his wife. The spanking of children, the frequency with which girls of sixteen may attend the picture show, the sort of shows they shall be privileged to see, the lateness of the hours a husband may keep and even the sort of meals the wife should get up are common problems. Within the week one judge has reconciled a seemingly wrecked family by decreeing that the wife should warm up the husband's suppers instead of serving them cold or letting him snatch them from the pantry shelves catch-as-catch-can. The extent to which one should indulge propensities for bridge, mah jong or golf must be considered frequently. The amount of social diversion a wife may demand or the number of lodges a husband may inspire by his attendance are put up to them again and again.

And yet Hoyle has been famous for three centuries for merely knowing a lot about one thing!

A Daniel come to judgment in these modern days would hardly be adequate for the job. Now a judge must be a combination of Solomon, Hoyle, Lord Chesterfield, Socrates, Etiquette for All Occasions, Diogenes and Mr. Caudle. He must be something of an authority on everything, even including the law.

Seasoned Travelers.

Juggler. They had known each other years ago these two men who had just met on the train. Both traveled extensively. A decade had elapsed since they had seen each other.

"Railway service is as bum today as ever," remarked one.

"Yes," said the other, "but I'm used to most of the ups and downs by now."

"Well, a man traveling as much as I do should get better treatment."

"You're right. [illegible]"

He was interrupted by a stern voice.

"[illegible]"

Hurriedly the two tramps slid off the box car.

Police on Own Resources.

A defense of the third degree—in the present low state of criminal law enforcement—is set forth in McClure's Magazine by Herbert Mayer, for many years a police reporter.

With crime overwhelming the courts, he subscribes to the maxim of the old-time policeman:

"There's more law in the end of a night stick than in a thousand courts."

To picture the situation, Mayer says that in 128 murders in New York from January 1 to October 30, 1923, only one person was convicted of murder in the first degree.

"Hampered as they are by lax courts, lax juries and disgusted prosecuting officers, the hard-pressed police have been driven to take the law into their own hands," the article in McClure's states.

"In some cases, at least, they are usnig methods outside the law to check the situation. Their methods are illegal, brutal even, to be sure, but what else would you have them do? With courts, grand and petit juries turning criminals out, with bail bond companies releasing notorious thugs to commit new crimes to pay the very bail fees, what other methods can the hard-pressed police employ and give protection to life and property?

"The 'third degree' is simply torture, usually administered in the form of a beating. I have seen it imposed a number of times, and bad tho it is for officers of the law to beat, bully, kick and knock about their prisoners to secure evidence and a confession, I'd a whole lot rather see a thug whipped half to death than to see a policeman killed by a thug.

"Not only is the rubber hose used on prisoners but punishment is given with feet, bludies, anything that will not leave marks for so long a time as to permit their use by attorneys for the defense. In getting a confession from a luckless Filipino who brutally murdered a young nurse, the police used lighted ends of cigars on his chest—at least he said so afterwards and I saw the marks—but were it not for that he would not today be on his way to the chair.

"I believe there's more law in the end of a night stick than in a thousand courts—and in America today that's nearly all the criminal law we've got."

JACK POLLARD WINS THIRD ROUND MATCH

Sam Reynolds Comes Thru Along With Two Ex-Champions Who Line Up for Semi-Final Matches Friday.

FRIDAY PAIRINGS.

Championship Flight (Semi-finals).
J. W. Hughes plays Jack Pollard.
John Redick plays Sam Reynolds
President's Flight (Finals).
Henry Doll plays L. L. Nelson.
Secretary's Flight (Finals).

Director's Flight (Finals).
R. D. Woodruff plays R. H. Rogers.

The present state champion, two former state champions and a fourteen-year-old boy fought their respective ways to the semi-finals of the championship flight in the state golf tournament here Thursday. Sam Reynolds present title holder, meets John W. Redick, Omaha Country club, and in 1915 a champion himself, in the finals.

Jack Hughes, who held the title in 1913, goes against Jack Pollard, the fourteen-year-old who has been playing like a veteran all the way thru the tournament.

This match will give the age vs. youth question another chance to come before the golf round table for discussion. They are insisting that young Pollard will crack—that he can't stand the strain

Only Weighs 107 Pounds.

If the cool manner in which he eliminated Eugene Slattery, 8 up and 7 to play, can be taken as a criterion those who are waiting for the boy to blow will have a long wait. He is slight of build, weighing about 107 pounds and is around five feet, eight inches tall. Nothing seems to bother him.

Slattery was off his game in the morning and at the end of the first eighteen, Pollard had him three down. Playing the same consistent golf that he displayed in the morning the Omaha high school junior added to his advantage in the afternoon until he put out the former Lincoln city champion at the eleventh hole of the second round. Their cards:

Afternoon Play.

Slattery—

In	460	544	554	—43

Sam Reynolds Comes Thru.

Sam Reynolds got away to a five-hole advantage over Ben Yousem during the morning and added to his lead in the afternoon until it stood 7 up 5. Their cards

Afternoon Play.

Yousem
Out	555	545	455	—43

Jack Hughes had a hard battle with Fred Vette another Omaha golfer not yet in his twenties. Vette was two down after the morning eighteen but came back and squared the match shortly after they started in the afternoon, finally working up to a one-hole advantage. He cracked then and Hughes won four straight holes. Their cards for the afternoon play:

ASKS COMMISSIONS TO FALL INTO LINE

Railway Commissioner Taylor Suggests Other States Make New Express Rates on New Basis.

Railway Commissioner Harry G. Taylor of Nebraska, who was one of the committee representing the state commissions that sat in conference with the interstate commerce case in the recent express case, mailed out Friday copies of a typewritten report of the history of the case, the work done and the conclusions reached. Each zone was represented on this conference committee.

In this case the western state commissions were successful in removing the discriminations that have long existed against this section of the country, which resulted in a 10 to 12 per cent reduction in Nebraska, among other states.

After setting out the details of the order secured, Mr. Taylor asks that each of the state commissions, in the interest of the cooperative movement with the interstate commerce commission, proceed to proclaim new intrastate rates on the same basis as interstate rates.

Mr. Taylor says that these are the fairest rates and provide the fairest relationships between sections of any schedule ever devised, and the joint concurrence of the states will make this same condition apply in the various states.

It is pointed out that it is necessary to eliminate all discriminatory relationships between artes and that the mechanical requirements call for the adoption of intrastate rates and interstate rates on a basis that will make them the same on block tariffs.

Messina's Wooden Houses.

Virtually the only wooden buildings through out all Italy are constructed of Southern yellow pine and are to be found in the city of Messina, according to Alfred P. Dennis of Washington, D. C., who has just returned from five years in Europe as spcial economic investigator for the federal bureau of foreign and domestic commerce. Mr. Dennis made this remark in a statement issued at New Orleans, which he visited as a member of a party of foreign trade experts who are touring the south. Prior to the war Mr. Deninis was engaged in lumbering and logging, and for several years he has been on the staff of the United States department of commerce.

"During my travels in Italy," said Mr. Dennis, "I was especially impressed with the absence of wooden houses. Practically the only strictly frame buildings in Italy are dwellings built of southern yellow pine—'peetch pine,' the Italians call it, that is about as near as they c get to 'pitch pine.' In Messsina, city of about 150,000 inhabitan there is a street about a mile lor called the Via del Presidente Ta and this street is lined on both sid for its entire length with 'peet pine' dwellings—really little bett than shacks—which were erect more than nineteen years ago to ten porarily shelter hundreds of familie rendered homeless by a severe eart quake that razed almost every buil ing in Messina at that time.

"After the great Messina eart quake American sympathizer promptly contributed funds wit which to purchase and rush severa cargoes of southern yellow pin lumber to Messina to aid in hous ing the sufferers. Although thes two miles of southern pine house were hastily erected with no grea care, yet they are still in splendi condition, notwithstanding the el ments and usage without any se ous deterioration, for they have been occupied constantly since the earthquake and undoubtedly will serve as comfortable homes for the occupants for another twenty years or more."

Mr. Dennis stated that owing to the peculiarities of the Italian climate, the lack o' native woods for lumber, and the cheap, plentiful and easily accessible supplies of stone the Italians use stone almost exclusively for their dwellings and other structures. Nevertheless, he said, yellow pine from the southern states of America is highly regarded by the Italians for interior trim, flooring, wainscoting and interior finish is now found in many of the large buildings in Rome and other Italian cities, he said and there is a good market and demand in Italy for southern yellow pine.

The Sad Man of the Senate.

John W. Owens in The New Republic. The saddest, heaviest-hearted man in the senate, in the whole of congress for that matter, is George W. Norris, of Nebraska. Yet he has been, and he probably is today, the least laden of all members with that supreme travail—how to get back and how to stay on, and on, and on. To stay in congress, particularly in the senate, for ambition's sake, for pride's sake, for pleasure's sake, and, in some woeful instances, for bread and butter's sake, that is what darkens the days and makes fearful the nights of the run of congress, who reached there by ruthless adherence to rule of devil take the hindmost, and are subject to constant attack under the same merciless order.

But Norris' vitals never are torn by that. He behaves in a way that not even LaFollette or Borah on the progressive end, or Brandegee on the conservative end, or Robinson on the democratic end, would dare. Any time at all he tells the soverign voters of Nebraska that he cares not three whoops in a gale of wind whether they send him back or not; rather hopes they will not; will not play ball with his own party at home, and it can go to the devil if it does not like his manners; and is perfectly willing to apply the recall to the nomination, election or anything else given him by the public.

What, then, causes his strange sadness? The same fact that, mainly, gives him the strange independence which would equal all human joy for ninety-nine in each hundred of the other members of congress. His real interest, his profound concern, is to do big and fine things for the common man; and he knows he will not, cannot, realize one per cent of his purpose.

These big and fine things do not constitute some elaborate and clearly formulated program for political, or social, or economic reconstruction. His purpose is to use government, so far as may be, to make daily life comfortable for the plain people, particularly the farmers of the middle west whom he knows and loves; to make the agencies of government decent and helpful. In the pursuit of that purpose, his instruments and immediate objectives vary from year to year, from condition to condition. Even so, he is a downhearted as though he had followed some brilliant, dazzling dream. After more than a score of years' unbroken service in congress, he may be heard to say, time and again, when a test of strength is coming: "Oh, they (the old line politicians of both parties) will be together."

KIWANIANS ARE CARTOONED

See Themselves as Others See Them Thru Medium of Oz Black's Charcoal.

Good looking members of Kiwanis club enjoyed seeing their less favored brethren pictured Friday noon by Oz Black, who varied his usual procedure of telling the men how fine they were, he said, to show them how funny looking they were. Some twenty were shown up by the cartoonist. The subject assigned him was "The Evolution of Man," and Mr. Black preceded his Kiwanis gallery by a dozen sketches showing the evolution of the chicken from the egg, the bolshevik from the mule and other phenomena of nature and art.

The club voted to wire congratulations to General Dawes and to Mark Woods, Kiwanian instrumental in determining the vice presidential nomination.

Final announcement was made of the "All-Kiwanis night" celebration at Kiwanis camp, near Milford. Campfire girls will stage afternoon and evening programs and will serve dessert to the visitors who bring their lunches.

REPUBLICANS ARE GENUINELY HAPPY

They Say Coolidge-Dawes Combination Guarantee That Business and Economic Principles to Be Applied.

Those active in republican state organization circles are delighted over selection of General Dawes as a running mate for President Coolidge. They point out that there's nothing experimental in either case and that the combination of two men of demonstrated ability is a guarantee that the party will apply business and economic principles in government.

Harry E. Sackett of Beatrice, chairman of the republican state committee, was out of town Friday but those who are close to him say that he will be more than pleased. Vice Chairman J. Reid Green said:

"It's mighty fine. A splendid ticket and a combination that puts the party on record as favoring application of business and economic principles in government. President Coolidge has established himself in the herats of the people by demanding rigid economy. General Dawes too has demonstrated the master hand and brain. He did this thru introduction of the budget system in governmental affairs at Washington and in bringing order out of chaos in Europe in connection with reparations."

Dr. T. W. Bass, secretary of the state organization, expressed his pleasure over the selection. E. P. Brown of the executive committee and chairman of the platform committee at the recent state convention, said:

"That's just fine. Nothing could have been better. hTe work of General Dawes in connection with the budget and reparations reveals him as one of unusual ability. He is outspoken. In this respect the combination is good. The president says little. General Dawes will say a mouthfull."

Mr. Brown listened in when the radio carried word of the casting of Nebraska's 19 votes for Coolidge.

"It was a wonderful experience," he said. "When we were in the early stages, we only hoped for this. It was great to hear it."

THE JARR FAMILY.

By Roy L. McCardell.

"Prunes for breakfast again!" said Mr. Jarr petuantly, as he eyed the dish in question. "Strawberries are in season, aren't they?"

"Now you aren't going to commence again are you?" asked Mrs. Jarr. "I'm sure prunes are the healthiest kind of food, and I suppose that's why the children have to be forced to eat them; and how can I make them eat them when you sneer at them?"

"Oh, pshaw!" replied Mr. Jarr, feeling that trouble could not be avoided and resolved to make a brave fight, as fight he must. "I don't know what's the matter with you. I can't say a word but what you go up in the air and make a fuss about it! But if you want to know, I'm tired of prunes! I think you might pay some attention to the meals and give us a change. Other things are just as cheap, if it comes ot that, and here it's prunes, prunes, prunes. We had them yesterday, and we have them today and we had them last week."

"The ones we had last week were not as large as these," said Mrs. Jarr, "and I see them packed in glass-topped boxes stuffed with nut kernels as delicacies. The very best people eat prunes!"

"And a lot of people are full of prunes, and I'm not going to be!" said Mr. Jarr. "I read in the papers the household hints, and I do declare if you tried some of those recipes it would be an agreeable change."

"Those women who write these things live in furnished rooms and eat canned goods. I'm willing to wager," replied Mrs. Jarr. "I know their recipes read good, but you go to make them and they don't taste good at all, or else half the things they call for are out of season. You eat what's before you. If it were anywhere else but in your own home you'd be grinning and smirking and praising the prunes! If you want strawberries and ice cream, give me more money to run the table! And when we had macaroni and cheese last night, you wouldn't touch it."

"I don't like macaroni and cheese," growled Mr. Jarr. "You might have something else."

"What else?" asked Mrs. Jarr. "Name something, and I'll get it."

"Well, that isn't my duty," said Mr. Jarr. "I've got to work hard and to pay for the things we eat. You should select them."

"Select what? What is it you want?" asked Mrs. Jarr.

"Well, we might have liver and bacon," said Mr. Jarr.

"We had it yesterday morning," replied Mrs. Jarr.

"Oh, well, stop fussing about it, then," said Mr. Jarr, "and—"

"And what?" queried Mrs. Jarr.

"And give me some more prunes," said Mr. Jarr, for, during the argument he had consumed the fruit in question.

"Take them all," said Mrs. Jarr. "They are too insipid for me. I never did like them."

Quite Capable.

London Weekly Telegraph: There is nothing sinful about having a reasonable pride in one's belongings and estate, but when a man has not the sense to keep his mouth shut about them he becomes a general nuisance.

A farmer of this order had met a few of his acquaintances on the market day, and, as usual, soon monopolized the whole of the conversation, talking about his steam thresher, his reaping machine, his barns, his this and his that, until they were all heartily tired of listening to him. He was the first to go, however.

"Aye," says one of them, "and has yea win'mil?"

"Na, that's what ah hae nae."

"Well, man, it's a peety ye had nae, for ye could blaw it yersel'."

GAMBLERS ADMIT CHARGE

Whist Players Plead Guilty—Tenant of Raided Room Denies Knowledge of Gambling.

The five men arrested Thursday afternoon at 1523 O while engaged in a friendly game of whist, pleaded guilty to a charge of gambling when arraigned in police court Friday morning. M. P. Warden, tenant of the room where the game was in progress, was charged with permitting premises under his control to be used for purposes of gambling, to which he pleaded innocence. Trial was continued to Tuesday and the whist players were released on $100 personal recognizance each. Warden's bond was fixed at $200.

Several of the men stated that Warden allowed them to use the room for a consideration of 50 cents each. He did not make any statements but asked for a lawyer. At no time had he known of any gambling going on in his room, he declared in entering a plea of innocence.

The five charged with gambling were arrested at 3:30 p. m. Thursday by Captain Anderson and Detective Schneible. They gave their names at the police station as Bert Forbes, forty-six, laborer, College View; Lester Drumm, twenty, laborer, 1904 P; Charles Hatcher, forty-seven, laborer, 2640 Q; H. G. Alberts, forty-eight, no occupation; and Ray Holmes, thirty-four, salesman, 1002 North Thirty-third. Warden appeared at the station a few minutes after the raid and was held.

The Homing Instinct.

Windsor Magazine: Do you know those distressing people who, as soon as they start on a holiday, begin to worry about coming home?

I met one in the train the other day. She was being "seen off" by a friend, and this was the burden of her conversation.

"I suppose I can't reserve my seat for coming home? What a bother! But I shall send my baggage in advance.

"I shall wear my blue serge costume for coming home in. I hope it will be a fine day; I hate coming home in the rain.

"I mustn't lose the return half of my ticket; and I'll ask about the time of the train coming back as soon as I arrive, to make sure."

"Well, goodby for the present, dear, I'm quite looking forward to coming back."

He Knew What to Do.

WHEN DAWES WAS LAWYER

city, Dawes to get half the profits In his spare time he took up the study of the gas business, his interest in it being incited by the developments of that business in Lincoln when D. E Thompson controlled it. He came to me one day and said that he was going back to Peoria to buy the gas plant there. I agreed to take some stock in it because I knew he knew the business thoroly, but it turned out that he could not make the buy. When he returned, however, he told me he had gone to La-crosse, Wis., and bought the plant there.

"Because men of wealth who knew him believd in him he was able to float bonds to pay for the greater part of the plant, which had fallen into the hands of men who were behind the times in that business. He sold out there a little later with a nice profit. He came to me not long after and asked me if I would sign a note for $50,000 with him. He said that he had arranged to buy the gas plant at Evanston, Ill, and needed this addition to his cash to make the first payment.

"I threw up my hands. I asked him if he knew that John R. Walsh, then the biggest banker in Chicago, was the gas magnate of that city, and wanted to know if he had the temerity to invade Walsh's territory. He said that he knew what he was doing, but I told him he was going too fast and that he had stubbed his toe. I refused to sign the note with him and he secured two other Lincoln friends, Mrs. John R. Clark and Gus Hanna, then of the old First National. And if he didn't go right into Walsh's office, told him what he was doing and got Walsh to finance the greater part of the bond issue. The Evanston gas deal made him a million, and then he was on the road he has traveled since.

"Dawes is one of two men in this world with whom I would trust all the money I have. He is a man of the greatest integrity and honesty, courageous, not amenable at all to the flattery of any of the great ones, and is not to be deterred from pursing any course he bieleves just and honorable. He has time and again refused to land his name to great financial instiuttions, or in any other way to cash in on his great reputation for honesty and straightforwardness."

One of the finest traits of Mr. Dawes, as related by members of the old group of friends in Lincoln, is his democratic ways and his generosity. He knows men in all walks of life, and they are equally welcome in his office and he recognizes them when he meets them anywhere. When he sold one of his business blocks in Lincoln some years ago the janitor, an old man, lost his job. When Dawes heard of it he directed a Lincoln banker to furnish him $50 a month as long as he lived. When illness placed his old friend Utt in distriessing financial circumstances, Dawes placed him on his feet again. He has probably a dozen or more pensioners in the city. Many of the women of the older Lincoln are often remembered by him with great bunches of roses.

One incident, of his early life sticks out in the memory of one old firend. A party was made up to go out hunting in the state. Those were the days when everybody who didn't have an annual pass could get a trip one by asking ofr it. Dawes was offered one, but refused, and he was the only member of the party that paid his own carfare.

Mr. Dawes was the owner for a number of years of several of the best business corners in the city. Later he trusteed these for the benefit of his children, and all these sites are now occupied by buildings erected by men whom his trustee leased them for ninety-nine years. These corners are the Terminal building site at Tenth and O; the corner at Thirteenth and O occupied by the National Bank of Commerce as well as the one diagonally across the street recently vacated by the same bank; the Twelfth and N corner occupied by a part of the Rudge & Guenzel store, and a twenty-five foot lot between Twelfth and Thirteenth and O streets, that is under lease to Miller & Paine.

announced by "warning" and then "assembly" blown on the trumpet by Frank Jackson, veteran bugler of the second volunteer cavalry of Nebraska About two hundred veterans answered the call. The meeting was presided over by Department Commander D Burr Jones of Omaha.

At the opening of the session the reports from the various standing committees, were read and passed on Chaplain W. H Underwood, of Blair, pronounced the invocation. A message of greeting from Governor Branch of Indiana, himself a Spanish War Veteran, was read to the assemblage and a invitation from the Grand Island chamber of commerce, inviting the veterans to hold their next year encampment there was also read The open discussion followed.

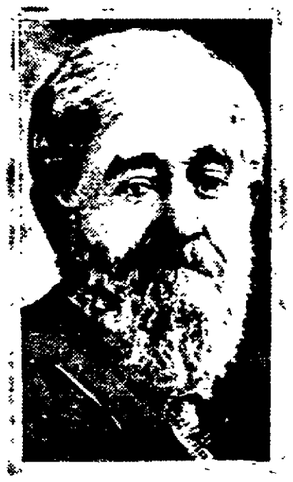

Ladies' Auxiliary Meets.

About fifty members of the ladies' auxiliary to the Spanish War Veterans, met at the Lincoln hotel for their fourth annual encampment. Lillah I Tucker of North Platte, department president, presided over the meeting The entire forenoon was taken up in attending to the private business of the organization.

The encampment was reconvened at 2 p. m. for a second business session and a joint meeting with the auxiliary. Governor Bryan, Mayor Zehrung, S. F. Sanders of the G. A. R, C W. Taylor of the American Legion, and Claude P. Hensel of the local post of Spanish War Veterans, gave addresses of welcome. Ray J. Abbott of Omaha and Mrs. L. I. Tucker of North Platte made the responses.

The program for Saturday, the last day of the encampment, will be opened by a final business session at which officers for next year will be selected. This will be followed by exercises in observance of Flag day. A fourth business session will close the encampment for another year.

REGULAR VOTER SINCE YEAR 1848

Beverly Armstrong of Mewaquna, Ill., is undoubtedly the oldest voter in the country. After casting his first vote in 1848 he has never failed to go to the polls at the succeeding presidential elections and he claims a record in regularly exercising the right of suffrage. He will celebrate his one hundredth birthday October 28 and is still active and will vote in November.

knowledge of the valuables, for he said he wanted the sacks consigned to St. Paul, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Helena, Butte and Roundup, Mont., Spokane and Seattle, Wash.

In the meantime other bandits entered a second car and with the help of clerks selected several registered mail sacks. The clerks were forced to help load the booty in the bandit cars. Then with a parting admonition to get in the cars and stay there the daring band sped away.

Waite drove the train to Libertyville where the alarm was given. Scores of officers from Chicago, Milwauke and dozens of towns in northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin sped to the scene.

Officers believe the bandits have taken refuge in cottages along one of the numerous lakes in northern Illinois.

Orders were issued to search every spot between Chicago and Milwaukee.

Police secured the number of one of the automobiles. Several suspects are in custody.

Chief Postal Inspector Germer received word that one of the mail sacks stolen from the train was found, empty, near Crystal Lake, Ill., not far from the scene of the robbery.

Working on the theory that the robbery may have been an "inside job" the authoritise here are questioning mail terminal employes who handled the shipment and employes of the federal reserve bank who knew of the shipment.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 13.—Nearly all of the crew of seventy mail clerks and others of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul mail train robbed near Rondout, Ill., last night, were taken to the federal building for questioning when the train arrived here today.

Postal inspectors said the whole affair looked like "an inside job."

PLAN NAVAL INQUIRY INTO BIG DISASTER

ship and it was feared the death toll would be increased. Probably the exors were placed aboard the hospital act cause of the tragedy will never be known. Two of those wso surrounded the three guns in turret No. 2 are alive but were uncertain as to what the blast was due.

The U. S. S. Mississippi was the crack vessel of its division.

Twelve miles north of San Clemente island yesterday the Mississippi took up a position near the Tennessee and Idaho for secret target practice.

Eighty odd men were in gun No. 2. Firty of them were stationed at the three guns, while the others were in the handling rooms. Lieut. Thomas E. Zellars was in command while Ensigns Marcus Erwin, J. J. Levasseur and James McCrea were with him

The breeches of guns No 5 and 6 were closed, locked and read to fire That of No 4 still stood open Four sacks of powder lay on the floor.

Then came the explosion. Someone may have given a premature order to fire A short circuit in the electric light cord drawn across the powder bags; a bit of ignited fragment left fro mthe shell fired just before or a spark from the powder ram—all have been advanced as possible causes of the blast.

There was a roar, a blinding blast of flame, a cloud of smoke—and silence.

Outside, members of the crew rushed to the turret. Eentrance was impossible. The heat had melted the two small doors until they were a part of the big steel tank.

An acetylene torch was secured and with it a hole was cut into the turret. Lieut. H. Donald Smith volunteered to be the first to enter. Donning a gas mask he crept thru the hole into the fuming, heated interior o fthe turret. He found it well filled with water. Someone in the heat and terror of the moment—some hero who will never be known—turned on the water and prevented further explosions with even greater damage.

Creeping forward, Lieutenant Smith found twisted, blackened and mangled bodies, but never a sign of life.

Only Three Survive.

Joseph Caviezel, Irving Etcherson and Robert Macadin, from the New Mexico were the only ones of eight from their vessel who went abroad the Missisippi as observers to survive. They owe their lives to the fact they either jumped or were blown from the turret forty feet down a hatchway into the powder magazine just as the doors of the turret closed automatically behind them.

Shortly after the Mississippi reached port and while the work of carrying the dead and wounded from the turren was under way, came the second explosion. A dead sailor's hand, swinging limply as the corpse was lifted from the steel floor, touched the firing switch of gun No. 50. The shell exploded and went hurtling down the harbor, passing closely by the steamer Yale. This blast increased the death toll by four.

Fearing a similar explosion of the shell in gun No. 6, the Mississippi was ordeerd outside the breakwater where, during thee vning, it steamed slowly back and forth, the muzzles of its fourteen-inch guns pointed toward the sea.

The three members of the New Mexico's crew who escaped returned to their ship and told their story, pressed for details by their comrades.

"The whole thing felt more like a blaze than an explosion," MacAdin said "Even the hevay steel plates turned white hot

"The gas was terrible. It choked and gagged and burned my throat and eyes like acid I could hardly see The boys, those alive, were fighting to beat back the flames so they could get out, but they all fell over

"I saw Ensign McCrea standing in the control room, cool and with the telephone receiver on his head. He was directing the men, with no thought for himself. He died like a hero He told me to go down thru the magazine room and that is what saved my life If I had tried to get out the hatchway I would have gone like the rest Down there I found Caviezel and Etcherson, and we made our way to the bottom deck."

Three officers are among the dead. They are Lieut. Thomas Zellars and Ensigns Marcus Erwin and William G McCrea

Ensign Levasseur, an observer from the U S. S New Mexico, had an almost miraculous escape. Standing on the shelf deck by the side of Ensign Erwin, he caught sight of the open gun breech as the command to fire was given.

Unhesitatingly he dived forty feet down the shaft of the endless chain power bucket He was cut and bruised but is still alive Erwin was instantly killed.

Citizens of San Pedro congratulated themselves upon their own escape. When the second explosion occurred in the harbor, the turret was revolving Had it remained in its original position the hangfire from the left gun which was discharged in the harbor would have gone into the center of the city.

The "Mississippi" was launched in 1917 at Newport News and is a sister ship to the "Idaho" and "New Mexico." The hull and machinery alone on the vessel cost $7,115,000.

Secretary Wilbur, appearing before congress recently said that the "Mississippi" should be modernized, including increasing elevation of guns and additional torpedo protection.

LATEST MARKETS

CHICAGO, June 13. Wheat and corn finished strong and higher on the board of trade while oats continued to lag.

Following ascension to new high figures on the crop, wheat encountered heavy profit sales. Some of the selling was attributed to reports showing improved weather and crop conditions.

Profit taking also took from corn most of its earlier gains. Strength in wheat however, held the market in check at a fraction above the opening.

Oats was dull and lower. The market lacked speculative interest. Shipping demand took from provisions the earlier gains and the market closed steady.

Easier feeling in wheat was created by diminished demand all around and a more favorable outlook for domestic wheat. Liverpool was lower at the start. Export business yesterday was light, around 250,000 bushels.

Better crop prospects with continued warm weather and slackened demand caused a lower corn opening.

Oats had a firmer feeling. Traces of yesterday's good cash business were in evidence today. Few sales were made in provisions. Prices were steady despite higher hogs and cables.

Tribune Report.

CHICAGO, June 13.—While price recessions in wheat, due to profit takin, are to be expected daily, holders still have confidence and look for irregularly higher prices. Eastern longs took profits in wheat early, but tehy were the best buyers later. Elevator interests for several days have been heavy buyers of July and sellers of September, indicating a possible desire to place themselves in position where they can take advantage of a late movement of new crop wheat, which seems possible.

A good class of buying was evident in corn. Much attention was given the Iowa report, with a condition of 77, the lowest since 1903. In that year the Iowa crop was only 229,000,000 bu.

Oats act a little tired. Export sales yesterday: Wheat, 250,000, including some durums(American).—Lamson.

Report on Nebraska.

GRAND ISLAND, Neb., June 13. — Lecount: Wheat thru this territory fairly promising; will make average crop, tho quite a lot thin and spindly. Corn very late. Some just coming up. Stand uneven but general average fair. Will require late fall to mature. Weather hot.

Cromwell: Curtis to Holdrege. Minden and Kearney wheat yields will be short account previous dry cold weather. They promise an average of 12 bu. per acre with favorable weather. Phelps county will need rain again in four days but elsewhere moisture sufficient for two weeks. Much corn re-planted and stand fair. Expect re-planted may be better than the rest.—Lamson.

Herald-Examiner Report.

CHICAGO, June 13.—The action of the wheat market yesterday plainly denoted the fact that support is well timed. According to trade leaders there is no change in fundamental conditions, but the rapid advance has tempted many longs to take profits and to some extent checked the demand. Most local operators look for an active bull market for several months.

Corn is gaining more friends. The demand for rye was good on the break and there were more bullish expressions in regard to this grain.—Lamson.

Modern Miller Report.

CHICAGO, June 13.—Considerable improvement report in Kansas wheat crop. Estimates for state range from 100,000,000 to 130,000,000. Crop has sufficient moisture to mature in most sections. Oklahoma promises 45,000,000. Some cutting in southern sections. Fairly good progress noted in territory east of Mississippi and general conditions there somewhat improved.—Lamson Bros. & Co.

Then and Now.

The New Republic: We have passed thru a season of investigations in Washington unmatched in all American history. There has never been a secretary of the interior whose record has been as bad as that of the late Secretary Fall. Nor will historians find parallels to the shameful work of Daugherty. Of Denby the least said the best, altho there has been no charge of personal profit in his connection with the leasing of the oil reserves. Three members of the cabinet have been permitted or pressed to resign. In the worst of all earlier presidential records, that of General Grant, there were not so many fatalities.

How does it come to pass that the nation seems not to know what to do in a case of wholesale corruption? George Washington dismissed an attorney general, bearing one of the greatest names in American history, for a cause by no means so clearly established; and he dismissed him in anger and with contempt that the whole country understood at once. In Grant's day a cabinet member convicted of robbing the public was shielded by the president; but the leaders of Grant's party did not shield or defend either Grant or his favorite, Belknap.

We have in our day a curious situation. Three members of the cabinet are out of office; the cause of their departure is not officially stated either by the president or any of his entourage. That of itself has been most confusing to a vast body of the people. But President Grant did the same thing or its equivalent. And yet the public of 1870 to 1876 was not confused. Both parties nominated in the year 1876 candidates who were known to be of the highest character. Grant wished a renomination but he was beaten in spite of the efforts of three of the greatest republican bosses of the time. And Blaine was made forever ineligible to the presidency because of his comparatively petty wrong-doing.

There is a difference between 1876 and 1924. And that difference is due more to the conduct of the great newspapers of the day than to the negative protection of official conduct. From the time that Archie Roosevelt revealed a little of the enormous speculations of members of the Harding administration to the present moment most of the great newspapers of the country have so managed the news or so commented on the matter of exposing guilt—as if that were the vital matter—that the articulate opinion of the country rather sympathizes with the culprits and condemns those who have uncovered the crimes against the public! Men who admired and approved the senate four years ago now "loathe that body of peanuts." You can hear the remarks anywhere. It was not so fifty years ago.

Admitting It.

"Uncle Bud Brizentine has finally owned up that old age is creeping over him," said Gabe Giggery of Rumpus Ridge.

"Has, eh?" responded Zeke Yawkey of the same locality.

"Yeah. He took a shot at an R. F. D. mail carrier tuther day, and when the judge axed him what he meant by such a caper he says, 'Well I'll just—p'tu!—tell you judge: I reckon I'm getting old. I used to live in the Tennessee hills, and was a union man; I just nacher'ly forgot the war was over, and took that there feller for a Confed'rit soldier.'" —Kansas City Star.

MEN AND THINGS

Those politicians who have been wondering if the farmers are still resentful may gain some information from the Iowa results, where Brookhart again won the republican nomination, because the farmers and the laborers were for him Brookhart is that familiar type of agitator who can talk long and well on any subject because he does not spend much time familiarizing himself with the facts. He is unstable and shifty, and entirely without any constructive ability. These facts are fairly well known to Iowa republicans. They voted for him in such large numbers because he stands as a protest against existing conditions, and they are still in a mood to protest themselves.

What has become of the old-fashioned republican who believed that the farmer was the indirect beneficiary of the protective tariff system? It has not been so many years ago that it was quite generally accepted by the farmers that while the tariff on wheat and corn did not help them materially because they were exporters the tariff, by building up an industrial America, furnished them with a home market composed of men who could eat more of what they raised and had for sale. Do fashions in ideas also change?

The flapper appears to have reared up for herself some rather sturdy defenders These tell us that the flapper is not nearly so bad as she is painted or as she paints. They say that underneath the flimsy clothing she wears a heart as fundamentally sound as that of our grandmothers, and that her pitiful little assumption of entire sophistication as to all matters merely covers a fear that she might be regarded as behind the times Now all of this may be true, but it is not nearly so important as how long this little game of pretenses is to be kept up As we recall it Old Dog Tray never did get his good name back.

If you do not happen to be a constant reader of Mary Gordon's column you are missing some very interesting phases of human thought We do not refer to the marvelous wisdom that is embraced in the answers that Mary Gordon gives to her correspondents; surrounded as she is at the office she could scarcely be other than Minerva-like in her replies. No problems in life are so serious as those which tear and rend at the hearts of those who are living under the hazy skies of romance, and whose sex life is stirring most profoundly. Could anything be more wistful than the little girls who wonder why they cannot acquire a steady and who desire distilled for them the mystery of how other girls manage to have so many admirers in their trams at all times while not even one glances more than once in her direction?

The measured order of the universe is the most impressive thing with which the minds of men come into contact. Not all of us are able to put into words our appreciation of this condition, but life is always a struggle among men to reproduce it in their own existence. It is this instinct that is unmistakably at the bottom of the constant movement towards better things. It is the answer of the query as to why the race is always in flux. Order has all the force and effect of law If we can attach its immutability to our various undertakings we can make sure of the results from the causes we set in motion.

A Lincoln man who journeyed to the Mexican town of Tiajuana as a part of his sightseeing tour of the coast was much interested in the story told in one of the popular weeklies about what is going on at that notorious resort. He says that after one has once seen the degrading scenes constantly being enacted in the gambling hells and saloons that form its chief activities he finds it rather difficult to think very highly of men again. The old frontier never saw worse exhibitions of licentiousness and bald wickedness as are flaunted as that town's attractions, and about the only valuable lesson to be gleaned from the experience is that we have yet a long ways to go, even in this century, before we can divest ourselves of actual savagery.

COMPLICATED.

Answers: A certain well known actress, herself something of a mimic, once objected to an imitation of herself by another comedienne. "It's not a bit like me!" she exclaimed. "It isn't supposed to be, dear," replied the comedienne. "It's an imitation of you imitating me!"

Judge: Doctor—You seem to be all run down Mrs. Peck. Let's see your tongue Henry—Taht's right, doc, you guessed it right off!

BRAIN TESTS
(By Sam Loyd.)

10 Minutes to Answer This.

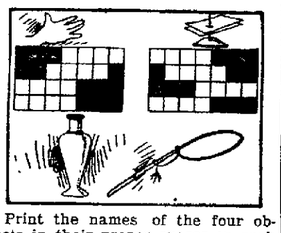

The "boss" was feeling pretty good the other day, so he said to his stenographer.

"Now, Mary, in view of the fact of your never indulging in useless vacations, I have determined to raise your salary $100 every year Beginning from today, for the ensuing year, you will be paid weekly at the rate of $600 a year; next year at the rate of $700, the next at $800, and so on, always increasing $100 per year."

"On account of my weak heart," replied the grateful young woman, "I suggest that it would be safer to make the change less abrupt. Start the salary from today upon the basis of $600 a year, as suggested, but at the end of six months raise it $25, and continue to give me a $25 raise every six months, so long as my services are satisfactory"

The boss smiled benignly upon his faithful employe, as he accepted the amendment, but a twinkle in his other eye set some of the boys to figuring as to whether or not the "Boss" made a wise move by accepting her proposition. Can you tell?

Wow!

"Uncle Louis," said little Eleanor, "do you know that a baby that was fed on elephant's milk gained twenty pounds in a week?"

"Nonsense! Impossible!" exclaimed Uncle Louis. "Whose baby was it?"

No Danger.

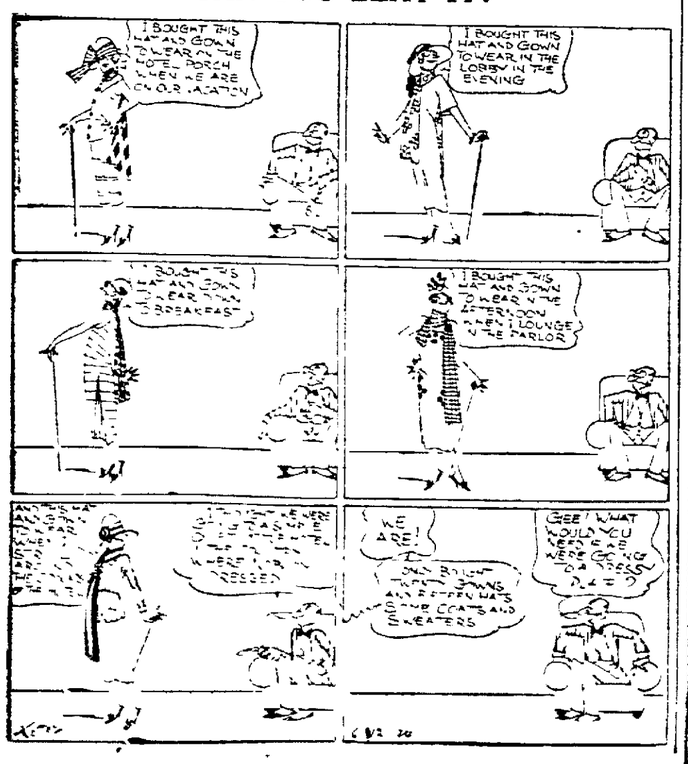

"Hey, Slack!" called the mayor of Petunia "Go over there and separate htem fellers before they kill each other."

"Kill nut'n!" returned Constable Sam T. Slackputter, the guardian of the peace and dignity of the hamlet. "No danger! They're ten feet apart and getting more so every minute"
